A NEW ERA.

The Oregonian's" New Press, and its Fast Work.

5,000 DOUBLE SHEETS AN HOUR

...ating, Pasting, Cutting and Folding—Description of the Mechanism—"The Oregonian" Makes a New Departure, with Everything New

The new press that begins its work to-day in the press room of THE OREGONIAN is an arrival too much distinction to be allowed to take its mighty work without an introduction to the one hundred thousand readers of the chief newspaper of the northwest. This wonderful machine has come at the call of this multitude of readers, and it has come to take a place permanent as well as unique among the great industries of this growing city If the demand for THE OREGONIAN had not increased so rapidly that all previous facilities were strained to the utmost without supplying the paper upon the call of all who wanted it, had not the cry from city, town and hamlet for hundreds of miles around been "more and faster," our old press, not equaled now by those of any other establishment of the northwest, would not yet have been compelled to take their stand in once under the shadow of a mightier rival the cry came, and THE OREGONIAN has never yet learned how to disappoint its readers. They wanted the paper at an earlier hour of the morning; they wanted larger and clearer type it was necessary to have space at our disposal that nothing important should ever again be crowded out, and it was indispensable to be prepared to do our press work in a comparatively short space of time, so as, while keeping the paper open to the last moment for the latest news, to be able also to place it at every door in the city at an early hour of the morning and at the same time to supply the earliest expresses and mails All these objects are now attained. You see this morning the new DAILY OREGONIAN

DESCRIPTION OF THE MACHINE.

The Web-perfecting press, printing from stereotype plates has been in use a good many years; but the process of stereotyping involves some delay, and moreover is not economical except for newspapers having a very large circulation, like those of our greatest cities. To obviate these difficulties and bring out a machine that could be run economically and yet do its work with as great rapidity as any, Messrs Hoe & Co of New York were engaged for a number of years in experiments with a view to the construction of a press to print from type forms upon a roll of paper running at a high rate of speed, and at the same time to deliver the printed papers cut, pasted and folded. The new machine now in operation in THE OREGONIAN building, upon which the present issue of the paper is printed, is the result of years of this study, and has involved the expenditure of large sums of money in experiments, as well as in the purchase of patents. Running at moderate speed, it gives twelve hundred eight-page papers per minute, ready for the carrier or mailing clerk, or twelve thousand per hour

PREPARING THE TYPE.

The type, which is set up in the usual manner in the composing room, is placed on curved galleys for taking proof, after which it is transferred to curved type beds, technically called "turtles," each one containing a page of THE OREGONIAN These beds are lowered through a way from the upper floor and are respectively swung over the press by rollers running upon an iron bar, to a point just above their proper places on the machine They are then firmly fastened upon a large central cylinder and which, at intervals, are four smaller cylinders, with rubber blankets on them covered with muslin On these cylinders the impression is taken.

THE ROLL OF PAPER.

The paper, which is in a large roll, say thirty inches in diameter and weighing perhaps thousand pounds, has previously been moistened for printing by running it from one spindle to another upon a wetting machine, which throws the water in fine spray over it. The roll is placed in position in front of the press, and the end of the sheet is passed through rollers and tapes and conducted around the first of the impression cylinders

TAKING THE IMPRESSION

As the type cylinder revolves against it the impression of four pages is taken upon the paper The sheet is then carried over a roller and introduced upon the second impression cylinder, and other four pages are printed upon it. We now have two papers, each printed on one side. The web is then carried through rollers under the large type cylinder, and by an ingenious system of bars and rollers is turned completely over This turning process is really the wonder of the machine. No one could credit it who had not seen it. From the turning apparatus it is conveyed to the third impression cylinder, and again receives, opposite the side printed by the first one, an imprint of four pages of paper Again the web passes around a and is carried to the fourth impression cylinder, against which is printed in its turn, on the back of the impression made by the second cylinder, another four pages. We now have complete newspapers, of eight pages each single revolution of the central or type cylinder has done this work, and this cylinder makes, the machine running at moderate speed, revolutions per minute

DISTRIBUTING THE INK

A portion of the central cylinder which is not occupied by the type is used as a distributing table for ink, which is placed in a fountain with the press, and conveyed by an arrangement of ink cylinders and composition rollers to the distributing surface, which in turn carries it to rollers placed between the impression cylinders for inking the type These rollers rise to pass over the type, and drop upon the ink surface when the type has passed.

CUTTING AND FOLDING

The paper, hitherto of double width, is now carried to the folder It passes over a roller on which a circular knife or cutter is adjusted which divides it into two strips One of the strips at this point passes the pasting apparatus, by which it is touched in the central margin with paste. Four pages of the paper are on one of these strips and four pages on the other. The two parts are now to be brought together. The strip containing the first, second, seventh and eighth pages has a shorter run to make than the other, so it is delayed by giving it a movement around a roller, while the other strip, containing the third, fourth, fifth and sixth pages, is hurried forward upon rapidly moving tapes; both strips are then turned at right angles to their former course by a movement around diagonal bars, the one which contains the inside parts of the paper is brought directly over the one containing the outside parts, and the two strips enter the cutting cylinders together. So exact is the work that the register is perfect. The two parts of the paper are brought together so that the margins correspond and they run between the cutting cylinders in which a serrated edge shoots out and cuts them apart.

FOLDING WITH LIGHTNING SPEED.

The papers, still carried between tapes, now enter the folding apparatus This consists first of cylinders provided with fingers or grippers, so adjusted as to seize the papers at the right moment Within the circumference of these cylinders are revolving blades so placed that the edges strike the paper in the center margin, between the pages, driving it down between two rollers through which it is carried, giving it the first fold As soon as the sheet is clear of the rollers a knife, placed upon an arm strikes it across the center of the page and drives it again between two other rollers, which give it its second fold, and so on to completion of the operation The papers are delivered in boxes at the sides of the folder, at the rate of one hundred a minute in each box. Every paper is folded with mathematical precision, and they drop into the boxes faster than they can be counted Yet the whole of this mighty machine, moving with such great velocity and wonderful effect, is started or stopped at the pressman's touch of a lever. After it is gotten ready it does all the work of itself, and with inconceivable speed and faultless precision So perfect are the adjustments of the enormous machine that every one of the manifold parts does its work at exactly the right time

DOUBLE OR SINGLE SHEETS

The press is so constructed as to print either double or single sheets Certain simple changes, not requiring more than a few minutes, will make the press ready either for an eight page or a four page sheet. We shall at present use the two forms, issuing double and single sheets, perhaps on alternate week days, but giving at least four double sheets a week, including the Sunday paper It was our intention, till recently, to issue double sheets every day from the start, but the volume of advertisements, owing to the severe depression of general business, does not as yet come up to the expectations that were formed a year ago However, we can change the order from single to double sheets at a moment's notice and, besides the four double sheets a week, we shall issue additional ones whenever press of matter requires it In any event the paper will give all the news every day and as advertising business grows more brisk the eight-page issue will be its invariable form

THE WETTING MACHINE

This machine has been adverted to, but has not been sufficiently described. The paper for the press is received from the paper mill in rolls wound on hollow spools or cores To wet the paper a spindle is run through the core, and the roll is lifted into its bearings at one side of the wetting machine, a friction strap is passed around one end of the spindle and attached to a lever, which is used to regulate the tension of the paper as the roll is unwound Another core is then placed on a second spindle, and this is placed in bearings which are connected to and slide on inclined brackets at the opposite side of the machine The end of the paper is passed over a roller and across a zinc board of considerable width, thence over a driving cylinder, and is pasted to the core just mentioned on the spindle opposite, which rests on the driving cylinder, and gets its motion from friction with it. As the paper passes over the surface of the zinc board mentioned it receives a shower of spray from a perforated conduit just above it, which is attached to the pipes that furnish the water supply to the building A roll thirty-six inches in diameter contains four to five miles of paper The machine will wet it for the press in twelve to fifteen minutes.

ADVANTAGES OF THE NEW MACHINERY

The great advantages of this new press with its appurtenances will be appreciated by readers at a glance, as it does away with the great amount of labor required in feeding separate papers to the press and passing them by hand through separate folding machines The gain in time is a very great matter Half an hour ten minutes, or even five minutes is an important division of time with a newspaper at say three to five o'clock in the morning Heretofore we have been obliged to go to press before three o'clock A M, and even then, for two years past it has been extremely difficult to get off our large and constantly increasing issues Sometimes in spite of our best efforts mails have been missed, and most city subscribers have at one time or another found their papers later than they could have wished All this now is past. The new press need not start till half past four, and we shall therefore be able to get into the paper much telegraphic news that hitherto has come too late for use, and local events that occur after half past two A M It has frequently happened that the telegraphic wires, working badly during the day, give us a great mass of news from two to half past four in the morning Such news we have been obliged to carry over to the next day Hereafter it will appear regularly in THE MORNING OREGONIAN In classification of news there will also be an advantage The pages will all be made up at one time and the matter can be classified as desired. Again, the machine can be stopped at any time and one of the "turtles" lifted to insert type containing any very late and important news

CALL AND SEE IT

The proprietors of THE OREGONIAN would be happy to see any of their friends who wish to call and examine this wonderful machine. The best time to see it at work is at 4 o'clock P M, when it is printing the Evening Telegram

FUTURE OF "THE OREGONIAN"

All the preparations having been made, THE OREGONIAN comes out this morning with everything new Its clear and large type will be found an improvement, and undoubtedly will be appreciated The energy and enterprise heretofore employed in carrying on the paper will now be redoubled in every department. The proprietors have never been so anxious to realize money from the paper as to make it the great journal of the northwest, and with this object in view they have steadily continued to expend upon improvements all the receipts of the business. The cash outlay now required for the running expenses of the paper exceeds $14,000 per month. This outlay has more than doubled within the last four years The proprietors have been looking forward eagerly to the time when they could command the facilities for publishing such a paper as they desired, and though they do not expect even yet to come up to their wishes, still they entertain a hope that the present effort will prove a long step in that direction It now requires a strip of paper twelve miles in length to print the regular edition of THE DAILY OREGONIAN, and more to print the weekly edition yet, judging the future from the past, the proprietors believe that in five years, or even less, the amount of paper required will be doubled again Just now there is depression in all kinds of business, yet though it temporarily affects advertising, as above explained, it does not, to any perceptible extent, affect the circulation of THE OREGONIAN, which is now much greater even than during the flush season of last year, and is steadily increasing With a hearty greeting to all its readers and to its brethren of the press, THE OREGONIAN now addresses itself to the larger work it has laid out for itself to do

An Irish Opinion

The campaign, as we have repeatedly said, is a fight for supremacy between the English and American commercial principles The protectionists who have had the upper hand here now for the last score of years and who have the splendid record to show which James G Blaine set forth so lucidly in his letter of acceptance, are sustaining the assault of the American disciples, hired or duped, of the Cobden club—Irish Nation.

THE STAGE

'RICHELIEU' TO-NIGHT —This evening Bulwer's greatest dramatic work will be presented at New Market theater Lawrence Barrett will assume the character of the crafty, priest-statesman, one of his most ambitious and impressive roles He is among the foremost actors of the present day, and, in the part of the grand old cardinal, confessedly has no superior—taking even rank with Irving, Barry Sullivan and Booth. His impersonation has, for many years, successfully run the gauntlet of severest criticism Many theater goers will remember, vividly, the strong impression produced on their minds by the rendition of "Richelieu" on the occasion of Mr Barrett's former visit. He returns with riper years upon his head and enriched by a broader experience. Then it was a rare intellectual treat, and now, supported by an excellent company, Barrett's performance gives every promise of a richer feast. He appears only once in this incomparable creation A well-filled box sheet furnishes gratifying testimony that the bold "Richelieu" has on public favoritism has lost none of its wonted force

THE FIRE RECORD

BIG INCENDIARY BLAZE AT CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND, Sept 21 —The scenes of two weeks ago were repeated to-day on a smaller scale The flats fire was then thought to have originated in an accident. To-day's occurrences lead to the belief that it may have been incendiary This noon fire broke out in Monroe Bros & Co's lumber yards, on the upper flats, and destroyed a large amount of property, including 2,000,000 feet of lumber When the flames were fairly under control dense smoke was seen pouring from the inside of the firm's dry house There was no fire outside and no wind was blowing sparks, so it was indisputably incendiarism That fire was extinguished with a loss of about $3000

Between 3 and 4 o'clock, while the department was about going home, thick smoke, as if from coal oil, suddenly poured forth from inside the dry shed in Brown, Strong & Co's lumber yard. Two suspicious-looking men were seen watching this fire at its inception, without moving to give the alarm This strengthens the theory of arson When this last fire broke out, and it became certain that incendiaries were at work, word was sent to neighboring towns for help, and engines came from Akron, Painesville, Sandusky, Elyria and Ashtabula. At 9 o'clock this evening the fire is under control, and no further danger is apprehended. Loss, $250,000 to $275,000, well insured

Schurz's Republican Record

On a careful dissection of Schurz's record it will thus appear that out of the whole twenty-five years in which he claims to have fought the battles of the republican party he was only in harmony with the party during about eight years at the utmost, during eight more he was in an over-ruled and disgusted minority, and during the remaining eight he was in open warfare against the party and in behalf of its enemies In short, from the republican standpoint, he has been right one-third of the time and wrong two-thirds And thus far the American people, as a whole, have sustained the republican view of the case —Chicago Inter-Ocean.

The newspapers still continue to publish columns of contradictory and imaginative accounts of the imperial interview The statement is repeated so often as to be perhaps credible that one great object was to prepare means for gradual disarmament The despots are said to be getting afraid that their vast forces will be the cause of a frightful increase of poverty and therefore socialism, to which they are leading, and some doubts are even felt whether in the coming conflict between the throne and the revolutionists the troops could be relied on English pessimists draw the conclusion, from the reconciliation of Austria and Russia, that Russia has been induced to abandon her designs on the Balkans, in consideration of her being allowed to do what she likes against England in Central Asia.

NOTES FROM GERMANY

German newspapers state that a rich American recently offered $100,000 to the heirs of Richard Wagner for the exclusive right of performing his opera, 'Parsifal' The guardian of the heirs, however, absolutely refused to entertain the proposition, and said that as long as he lived "Parsifal" should be produced at Baireuth only in compliance with the clearly expressed wish of the dead master

Much interest is excited in Germany by the approaching trial of the appeal of Mme Kalomine from the decree of the supreme tribunal of Darmstadt, which divorced her from Grand Duke Louis of Hesse, and allowed her £1000 per annum The appeal will be heard on the 16th prox General opinion among German lawyers is that the lady will win the case and that the divorce will be annulled

THE COUNTESS DE CHAMBORD

The Paris Figaro publishes a long letter to prove that the enmity which still exists between the two royal houses of France, is mainly due to Comtesse de Chambord She still hates the Orleanists, and opposes all compromises. It was she who insisted on her late husband issuing the white flag proclamation, which gives his pretensions the coup de grace.

The Orleanists are founding great hopes on the next election, when they believe the republicans will lose many seats in consequence of the Chinese war It is asserted the bulk of the Bonapartists are disgusted, both with Plon Plon and his son, and that they will espouse the cause of the count of Paris

WOLSELEY AND GORDON

One small crum of comfort extracted from the telegrams of General Gordon, by the ministerial organs, is that he is in favor of the Nile, and not of the Suakin Berber route Doubts are now felt whether, even if Wolseley gets to Khartoum he will be able to induce Gordon to leave, all his resolves still being apparently in favor of retaining this territory, unless it be taken in hand by the sultan of Turkey It is not known whether Wolsely has, among his other powers, that of arresting Gordon, but it is thought by cynical observers that some such authority will be required to dispose of Gladstone's white elephant.

THE THREATENED REBELLION IN BELGIUM

The liberals of Belgium are sharply criticised by all liberal papers in Europe for their refusal to accept the results of constitutional government when the results are against them Having outbidden in bigotry and dogmatism the most illiberal and fanatical party in Europe they now have recourse to violence

Alarmists look for nothing short of civil war The king is hooted daily radical papers speak of him as Mr Leopold Coubourg, and street crowds shout for the republic but the gravest danger in it all is that the disorders may provoke foreign intervention

PIQUED AT AMERICAN JOURNALS

The Paris press has taken a new tack, and is now abusing the United States almost as savagely as it does England The leader of the crusade is the Paris mouthpiece of Waldeck Rousseau minister of the interior The cause of the angry criticism is editorial and cable comments on the Chinese expedition It seems as if silly reason for journalists had located itself permanently in Paris, where no suspicion is too absurd no folly too egregious to serve as a basis for an editorial

ENGLAND'S INFERIOR NAVY

The Pall Mall Gazette is publishing a series of sensational articles, designed to show the deplorable condition of the British navy, which is stated to be far inferior to that of France The Gazette declares that the boasted supremacy of England on the seas will require the expenditure of £50,000,000 The opinions of many naval experts in support of these statements are published daily, in the form of interviews and letters

A CHANGE FOR IRELAND

It can be definitely stated that there will soon be a change in the lieutenant governorship of Ireland It is certain that Earl Spencer will retire not later than next year, and it is quite possible that he may resign within a few weeks. It is reported that the Marquis of Ripon, who has just resigned the viceroyalty of India, is to succeed Spencer This statement is doubted, in view of Lord Ripon's delicate health, but the fact that he is an ardent Catholic might make the appointment an exceedingly judicious one

RUSSIA'S GREAT GOLD FIELDS

M Kattkoff, a well known Russian journalist, declares that what California is to America Caucasus might be made to Russia, and asserts that with a small expenditure of money the mines of the Caucasus would furnish as much gold as one would like. Meantime attempts are being made to boom an international railway across the two continents, and enthusiasts are already dreaming of the time when a journey between Paris and Pekin can be accomplished in twelve days

ENGLAND'S BOLD STEP IN EGYPT

The action of Lord Northbrook in Egypt, in suspending the law of liquidation, has raised a storm of protests in Paris and Vienna. As a matter of finance there can be no doubt that the action was an excellent step to take, but England had no right to take it without the consent of all the powers which made the law France will move heaven and earth to get another conference and block the English policy

DYNAMITE SCARE.

Scotland Yard officials declare that a coalition exists between the invincibles and the nihilists, for fresh attacks upon life and property in London General belief is that the story is well founded, and another dynamite scare is imminent.

IRELAND

NATIONAL LEAGUE MEETING

DUBLIN, Sept. 21 —The National league held a meeting yesterday, at Ballinasloe, Joseph McKenney, member of parliament for Ennis, declared Ireland would never be contented until she was free Irish members of commons, he said, opposed the liberal government, because they expect more from the conservatives. Sidney Everett, secretary of the American legation at Berlin, says "The relations of Everett with the American colony in Berlin lately became unbearable Everett no longer possessed the confidence of his countrymen The trouble probably dates from the Sargent affair"

NOTES FROM ASTORIA.

Mysterious Disappearance of Mrs Trehunen—Local Politics—The Improvement at the Mouth of the Columbia

ASTORIA, Sept. 20

The news of the unexpected death, in Portland, of Thomas Goodwin, who for thirty-seven years has been a respected resident of Clatsop county, was received by this community with deep regret. He has for years been one of the most successful dairymen on Clatsop plains. He will be buried with masonic rites and ceremonies on Sunday, the 21st inst., by Temple lodge, No 7, of which he was an honored and pioneer member At his own request his remains will be interred in the old cemetery on Clatsop plains, beside the body of his brother

The unaccountable disappearance of Mrs. Trehunen, a married woman and mother of several small children, of whom the youngest is only five months old, has perplexed this community for several days. While engaged in the regular routine of domestic duties, apparently without making any preparation for a continued absence or even a short neighborly visit. She was seen by her husband, the proprietor of the Half'way house to upper Astoria, to leave the house by a side door on Monday last, since which time no clue to her whereabouts has been discovered Day after day since that time scores of her countrymen—Scandinavians—have been scouring the woods in search of her, imagining that in a fit of sudden mental aberration she wandered away from her home and was lost in the forest between here and Young's river A reward of $200 if found alive or $100 if dead has been offered by her friends with no successful result., however thus far The general belief now is that the unfortunate woman must have thrown herself in the river and drowned.

The Astoria Blaine and Logan club have completed their organization and are getting ready for an aggressive campaign in Clatsop county The members decided to organize on a military basis. Officers have been elected, a drill master appointed and suitable uniforms ordered from San Francisco Senator J N Dolph, under the auspices of the club, has kindly consented to address the citizens of Astoria on the political issues of the campaign on Tuesday evening next. The state republican committee can rest assured that republican speakers who may desire to visit this city will find all the preliminaries satisfactorily arranged by our Blaine and Logan club

Astorians generally have been much in hopes that ere now the dull times which invariably follows the close of the fishing season, would have been relieved by a partial expenditure of a portion of the generous appropriation made by congress for the commencement of the work in permanently improving the mouth of our river The short visit paid yesterday by Captain Powell to our city afforded an opportunity to some of the members of our chamber of commerce to have an informal interview with that genial and affable gentleman, who assured them the work would be commenced as soon as all the preliminaries were arranged to the satisfaction of the secretary of war, and the appropriation was declared available

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

Preparations for the Grand Lodge to Meet Next Month at Albany

The grand lodge, Knights of Pythias of Oregon, meets at Albany Tuesday, October 14 About seventeen lodges are now included in the jurisdiction of the Oregon Grand Lodge This is about the number for last year, since which time the Washington territory lodges formed a separate jurisdiction The order has shown a very material increase in membership in the past year and the organization of new lodges has contributed to this increase During the year more interest has been shown as regards the uniform divisions and several companies have been formed Delegates and Knights attending the session of the grand lodge at Albany will pay full fare going, and return on certificates to be furnished by the grand keeper of records and seal. Visitors will be met at the depot Tuesday noon by the Albany lodges and escorted to their hotels for luncheon In the afternoon there will be a competitive drill by uniformed divisions for prizes and other exercises The grand lodge will meet in the evening for preliminary work, holding a short session, after which a ball will be given. On the next day the grand lodge will meet for the transaction of business which may occupy two days The officers will be elected for the ensuing year Albany knights have sent invitations to all state lodges and promise their visitors a cordial and knightly greeting This session of the grand lodge will be one of interest to all members of the order, and those who can make it possible to attend should do so

The new silver mines, reported to have been discovered near Hood river, have so far failed to attract any attention in this neighborhood. Something of the kind to draw away our supernumerary population would be a God send to the country

Dayton (Ohio) Journal As a matter of fact, clear to universal observation, the democratic prospect has not looked much more gloomy since the Brough-Vallandigham campaign, when Val was beaten by over 100,000 votes. The republicans of Ohio will carry the election in Ohio without doubt.

The tenacity with which people abide by their early faith in Ayer's Sarsaparilla can only be explained by the fact that it is the best blood medicine ever used, and is not approached in excellence by any new candidate for public favor.

Dr Thessing had quite an adventure with an unbroken colt he drove to Oregon City the other day Near that city he drove the animal to water at a mill pond, when it waded in till the water nearly covered it and then refused to back or turn, and the doctor found it necessary to procure assistance, attach a rope to the animal and pull it through to the other side.

PARADISE FOR SPORTSMEN

This appears to be a good year for bears From all quarters come accounts of these animals having been killed, and their skins and carcasses are frequently seen in our markets An express driver has a young one which he carries around perched on the seat beside him, and now Mr Potter has come up from the beach with the cub which has immortalized him, and shared with him the honor of an illustration in an eastern paper A gentleman who arrived here a day or two since thinks this must be a paradise for sportsmen On his way up the river from Astoria he saw at one point a sportsman from this city with the antlers of three huge elk Not far above a bear was seen walking along the shore of the river, and at Hume's cannery there were several fresh bear skins, the carcasses of three deer and a wildcat. Here he found the markets filled with grouse, pheasant, quail, snipe, pigeons, and more and finer trout than he ever saw before, to say nothing of salmon of half a dozen varieties, from the little blue back up to the huge fellows which come over from Nestucca bay, and which well supply the place of the lordly Chinook, now out of season, being of high color and fine flavor, though not so rich in oil, which, however, is considered an advantage by many for whom the Chinook is too rich

THE COWLITZ RIVER MURDER.

From Washington territory exchanges are gathered the following particulars in regard to the murder of A. Pickler, on Cowlitz river, mentioned in the dispatches yesterday Mr Pickler was a German who was looking for land He had a gold watch and about $2000 on his person The body was found by Mr Duvaul Sept. 13 hid beside a log on Big Bottom, and covered with billets of wood. Jim Yorke, an Indian, states that about fifteen days before two men obliged him by threats to give them his canoe. He describes one of them as of dark complexion, smooth shaved, with black coat and pantaloons, the other was a small light complexioned man, wearing a light coat and gray hat and having on overalls and a pistol in the hip pocket, which had worn a hole through the pocket It is thought that they had followed Pickler up for the purpose of killing and robbing him, as they had no blankets and pretended to be looking for land There is every indication that Pickler made a desperate fight for his life, and it is thought by many that his murderers are wounded and are hiding in the woods.

VERY LITTLE GAME.—There was no hunting excursion to Sauvie's island yesterday, the poor bags made on the previous Sunday having convinced the sportsmen that they were pressing the season, and that they must wait till the frosts have cut down the camas plants and the rains have filled the lakes where the ducks have their haunts Several crack shots went out on the Columbia bottom for snipes, but met with poor results A few tried their luck at scattering wood duck above Ross island, but succeeded in capturing only a small number

The following facts are given It has now in operation 10 000 miles of road, embracing 2491 miles east of the Mississippi from Fortress Monroe to Cincinnati, Louisville, Chicago, Paducah, Memphis and New Orleans

IN THE WEST

West of the Mississippi river Huntington and his associates control, as is well known and dictate the policy of four railroad systems The syndicate still retains its proprietary interest in the St Louis and San Francisco road, which is half owner of the Atlantic and Pacific The mileage of railroads stated in the New Orleans paper does not include the total mileage in other countries, nor interests in several steamship lines plying to China, Brazil, gulf of Mexico and coastwise ports on the Atlantic and Pacific The Morgan New Orleans fleet alone numbers twenty steamships, some of which are of the largest tonnage Railroad construction has ceased, with the exception of the completion of the Oregon Pacific (less than 100 miles) which will be resumed when the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company is ready to connect. It is believed the great California syndicate of railroad builders will rest from their labors The systems east and west of the Mississippi are entirely distinct in their organization, management and operation and will be so maintained

RAILROAD NOTES

THE CONFERENCE AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Sept. 20—The general managers of western and southwestern lines, at their adjourned session this morning, resumed negotiations with a view to forming a pool on Colorado and Utah business No progress, however, was made, and adjournment was taken to 2 o'clock this afternoon The impression last night was that no further attempt would be made at this time toward the settlement of the question of Colorado and Utah traffic, beyond possibly an attempt to maintain rates similar to the ninety days agreement entered into yesterday, with respect to Nebraska business

Freight agents of all Omaha lines have been in session to-day, in an endeavor to arrange a tariff to Nebraska points, in conformity with the action taken by the managers yesterday A number of officials intend leaving the city this evening, and in case of failure to agree upon some basis of settlement this afternoon it is deemed doubtful if negotiations will be resumed again next week

Blaine Answers the "Sentinel's" List of Interrogatories.

INCIDENTS IN HIS EARLY LIFE

Grand Demonstration at Republican Headquarters in New York—Political News Notes

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept 20—In the Blaine libel suit in the district court this afternoon, Mr Blaine's attorneys filed the following answer to the interrogations propounded by the Sentinel's attorneys, on September 5

I, James G Blaine, of Augusta, Maine, on oath depose and say, in answer to the foregoing interrogatories

First—Harriet B Stanwood

Second—In Georgetown, Kentucky, in the spring of 1848

Ninth—I was married at Millersburg Ky, the 30th of June 1850, in the presence of Sarah C Stanwood and S F Boone The marriage was secret Having doubt subsequently of the validity of the marriage, under the laws of Kentucky, which then stringently required a license from the clerk of the county court, I had the marriage solemnized the second time, in Pittsburg Pa, on the 29th of March, 1851, in the presence of John V Lemoyne and David Bell

Tenth and eleventh—Jacob Stanwood was the eldest brother of my wife I had no acquaintance with him at the time of my marriage, had never seen him or heard of him in any way, directly or indirectly before my marriage I met him for the first time in February 1852 I had two letters from him after my marriage and before I met him, one warmly welcoming me as a member of the family the other inquiring if he could promote my business interests by a loan of money I had no other correspondence of any kind until after I had personally met him, in February 1852 My wife had two other brothers, neither of whom I had ever met when I came to New England in February, 1852, nor did I ever meet any other relatives of my wife before my arrival in New England in February, 1852.

Fifth avenue from Twenty-sixth to Twenty-ninth streets was crowded with 15,000 people long before 9 o clock, the hour appointed for Blaine's introduction A platform had been erected in front of the parlor windows of the headquarters, and it was tastefully decorated with flags A band of music played many lively airs, and electric lights and fireworks lit up the scene The enthusiasm of the crowd was extraordinary

Promptly at 9 o'clock Blaine arrived from the Fifth avenue hotel Police Captain Williams occupied a seat on the box of the carriage with the driver No little difficulty was had in making a passage for the carriage Blaine was accompanied by Senators Hall and Hawley, Colonel Geo W Hooker, Chairman Jones and Secretary Fessenden of the national committee, Assistant District Attorney Lenney of Brooklyn, ex-Governor Cornell, Emory A. BLAINE'S REMARKS.

When Blaine was recognized by the people, a tremendous shout went up Draper introduced Blaine as "the ninth in the honored list of republican presidents." This caused more cheering, and then Blaine, stepping to the front of the platform, said,

To be received by the city of New York is indeed an honor, to be received by such a magnificent demonstration as that which I see before me touches me deeply, moves me deeply, and calls for the most sincere and heartfelt thanks [Cheers] Your great emporium, this city of New York, represents in its growth and grandeur, the United States of America. [Cheers] It is not merely the chief municipality of the Empire state, it is the commercial metropolis of the continent, and I conceive it to be one of the chief honors of my life to be thus welcomed to its hearty hospitalities [Cheers] I renew to you and impress on you the gratitude I feel, the thankfulness I offer, for all that you tender me [Shouts of "You are welcome," and continued cheers]

LOUD CALLS FOR BLAINE

Mr Ellis H Roberts, editor of the Utica Herald, made an address, and then the crowd again shouted for Blaine He returned to the platform and witnessed a parade of 2000 members of various political clubs After the uniformed men had passed, Mr Blaine, being again called for, stepped to the front and said "Allow me to thank you for this fine display, and to wish you all a happy good night." ARMANDE'S ACCIDENTAL DEATH

Francois Armande, who was killed by falling down stairs at the house where he resided, No 9 Mill street, did not break his neck as at first stated A post mortem examination developed the fact that death resulted from the wound in the forehead, which undoubtedly produced concussion of the brain The coroner's inquest revealed the fact that Armande had been drinking heavily in the early part of the evening and that the stairs were very narrow and somewhat curved. Deceased was about 48 years of age There was no doubt that the tumble down the stairs was accidental, and such was the verdict rendered.

A STRONG SPEECH.

... Review by Senator Sherman of the Issues of the Canvass.

THE HISTORY OF REPUBLICANISM

... of the Positions of the Two Parties—Recollections from History—Argument for Protection

ASHLAND Ohio Aug. 30 Senator Sherman delivered a speech here this afternoon in the presence of 10 000 persons After ... introduced the senator opened as follows

Fellow Citizens The highest duty of ... citizen in a republic like ours is to annually review his political position and determine for himself which party in the ... contest will be most likely to advance the interests and honor of the country and his state

The difficulty sometimes is that neither party suits us in all things A good citizen may like the republican party on one question and the democratic party on another but he can only vote for one He would be content with either were the other dear charmer away or he may be a former an egotist a pharisee, or a dude, ... say there are rascals in all parties and therefore, he will vote for neither He won't vote for this candidate because he drinks a glass of ... he don't write good English he don't ... all his words according to the dictionary ... he loved unwisely and too well It is in this way that the sensible, common people of this country choose their party or their candidate

THE OLD RULE

... is to ask of a party Is it patriotic? Is it courageous strong reliable, true to the constitution true to the honor and fame of the country and to the rights of the humblest as well as the loftiest citizen of the republic? The questions as to a candidate are Is he honest is he faithful is he able? We do not expect of candidates the perfections and virtues of life We ... that if such a man lives and should be presented by any party for office he would be blackened by the mean low cry of party ... that follows at the heels of all parties as was done with Washington Jefferson Jackson and Lincoln We should choose a party as we would choose a wife This duty which every voter either has done or will do or should do You would not choose a wife merely because she is beautiful or virtuous or good or sensible or a good housekeeper and so on but because she has as you think enough of all these qualities to make you love her You may take her for better or for worse and find by experience a good deal of both In the choice of a party you have the advantage of a change every year if there is cause for it, but generally if your first choice is founded on honest conviction your first love is the ...

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY

... fellow citizens I have believed since the organization of the Republican party in ... that this party has more completely than any other party since the formation of our government performed the functions and duties of our national government and that in its principles aims and tendencies it is better fitted than any other party to govern this country in the future and therefore, that it ought to be continued in office by the people of the United States If I am right in this then Blaine and Logan should have your votes My duty is done when I give you reasons for the faith that is in me without any argument of the patriotism, conduct and character of any other parties or candidates

The republican party as you know was formed by the fusion of the old parties with a view to resist the extension and spread of slavery into the western territory but ... the free states as well Doctrines were ... by the democratic party that would have carried slavery at the will of any slave-holder into every state and territory of the United States They held that slaves were property and as such must be protected everywhere The issue came whether this country was to be all free or all slave This was thirty years ago But few of this audience mingled in this early strife The republican party was the organization through which the people broke the political power of slavery in the election of Abraham Lincoln No one ever among our democratic adversaries will now question the vital importance and wisdom of the struggle for human liberty And yet when the contest was going on how bitter and stubborn was the strife even here in Ashland I can remember things printed and said even here in opposition to the republican party that the authors would not think it kind in me to read now Let bygones be bygones When the opposition to Lincoln was organized into war party lines greatly weakened by thousands of democrats joining with the republicans took up arms for the Union and did their duty nobly

... settled into a comparatively small minority ... what then was left of the organization ... under the control of those opposed to the war and was at different times a series of ... arraignment to the prosecution of the ... The nomination of Vallandigham the ... war resolutions of the Democratic National Convention of 1864 and other similar proceedings no doubt prolonged the war by encouraging the public enemy

The second stage of republican success ended with the re-election of Lincoln and the triumphant close of the war Twenty years have passed away since that time A generation of men has come upon the stage of life The heroes of the war are now past the meridian of life A number of difficult questions have been solved everyone by the republican party and each of them well solved Our errors have been on the side of generosity No act of violence no deprivation of rights no act of oppression mark the history of any republican administration The southern states have been restored to their places in the Union and the only dishonor attached to the process has been the violation on their part of the conditions of reconstruction and the denial by fraud and violence of the rights of colored men Our currency has not only been restored to the specie basis but is confessedly better than it was or could be under the old ideas that prevailed Our credit is untarnished and stands higher in the money markets of the world than that of any other nation not even excepting Great Britain I submit to you whether we as republicans may not be justly proud of the results of republican administration?

SOME RECOLLECTIONS

Those of us who have lived through the period of this struggle and growth can realize by a single glance of memory from the present to the past the great and beneficial change which has been produced in the United States since the democratic party was in power, but those of you who are about to assume the reins of government will appreciate the change more by reference to some figures taken by me from the statistics of the census

From 1860 to 1880 our population increased from 31 400,000 to 50 100 000, or more than 58 per cent

The number of manufacturing establishments increased from 140,000 to 252,000 The capital employed in manufactures increased from $1,000,000 to $2,709,000, or nearly three fold The wages paid to laborers increased from $379,000,000 to $948,000,000 or nearly three fold The value of material used in manufactures increased from $1,031 000,000 to $3,396,000,000, or more than three fold and the value of products from $1,885,000,000 to $5,369,000,000, or about three fold

But this enormous improvement in our condition is not confined to manufactures It extends to agriculture and other pursuits as well.

The number of farms in 1860 was 2,044,-

A STRONG SPEECH.

[An Able] Review by Senator Sherman of the Issues of the Canvass.

THE HISTORY OF REPUBLICANISM

[A Revi]ew of the Positions of the Two Parties—Reco[l]lections from History—Argument for Protection.

ASHLAND, Ohio Aug 30 —Senator Sherman delivered a speech here this afternoon [in] the presence of 10 000 persons After [bein]g introduced the senator opened as fol[lows]:

Fellow-Citizens The highest duty of [ev]ery citizen in a republic like ours is to an[n]ually review his political position and de[ter]mine for himself which party in the [pend]ing contest will be most likely to ad[vance] the interests and honor of the coun[try] and his state

The difficulty sometimes is that neither [pa]rty suits us in all things A good citi[zen] may like the republican party on one [qu]estion and the democratic party on an[oth]er, but he can only vote for one He [sh]ould be content with either were the [lea]der dear charmer away or he may be a [re]former an egotist a pharisee or a dude [an]d say there are rascals in all [pa]rties and, therefore he will vote [wi]th neither He won't vote for this [ca]ndidate because he drinks a glass of [be]er; he can't write good English he don't [spe]ll all his words according to the diction[ary]; he loved unwisely and too well It is [no]t in this way that the sensible, common [pe]ople of this country choose their party or [th]eir candidate.

THE OLD RULE

[W]as to ask of a party Is it patriotic? Is [it c]ourageous, strong reliable, true to the [con]stitution true to the honor and fame of [th]is country, and to the rights of the hum[ble]st as well as the loftiest citizen of the [re]public? The questions as to a candidate [a]re. Is he honest is he faithful is he [ca]pable? We do not expect of candidates [al]l the perfections and virtues of life We [kn]ow that if such a man lives and should be [pr]esented by any part, for office he would [be] blackened by the mean low cry of party [str]ife that follows at the heels of all parties [It] was done with Washington Jefferson [Ja]ckson and Lincoln We should choose [ou]r party as we would choose a wife This [is a] duty which every voter either has done [or] will do, or should do You would not [ch]oose a wife merely because she is beauti[fu]l, or virtuous, or good or sensible or a [go]od housekeeper, and so on But because [sh]e has, as you think, enough of all these [qu]alities to make you love her You may [ta]ke her for better or for worse and find by [ex]perience a good deal of both In the [ch]oice of a party you have the advantage of [a] change every year if there is cause for it [bu]t generally, if your first choice is founded [up]on honest conviction your first love is the [be]st.

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY

Now, fellow citizens I have believed since [th]e organization of the Republican party in [18]54 that this party is more completely [th]an any other party since the formation of [th]e government performed the functions and [du]ties of our national government and that [fr]om its principles aims and tendencies it [is] still better fitted than any other party to [ser]ve this country in the future and there[fo]re, that it ought to be continued in office [by] the people of the United States If I am [rig]ht in this then Blaine and Logan should [rec]eive your votes My duty is done when I [gi]ve you reasons for the faith that is in me [wi]thout any arrangement of the patriotism [co]nduct and character of any other parties or [ca]ndidates

The republican party as you know was [for]med by the fusion of the old parties with [a v]iew to resist the extension and spread of [sla]very, not over the western territory but [to] the free states as well The trimes were [adv]ocated by the democratic party that [wou]ld have carried slavery at the will of any [sla]veholder into every state and territory [of] the United State They held that [sla]ves were property and as such must [be] protected everywhere [...] [...]ther this country was to be [...] [...]ve. This was thirty years ago [...] [...]this audience mingled in the [...] [the] republican party [...] [by] which the people [...] political pow[er] of slavery in the election of Abraham [Li]ncoln No one ever among our democratic [ad]versaries will now question the vital [im]portance and wisdom of the struggle for [hum]an Liberty And yet when the contest [wa]s going on how bitter and stubborn was [the] strife, even here in Ashland [...] [...]mber things printed and said even here [...] [opp]osition to the republican party that [the] authors would not think of kindling now [...] read now Let bygones be bygones [...] [W]hen the opposition to Lincoln was organ[ized] into war party lines greatly weakened [by] thousands of democrats joining with [the] republicans took up arms for the Union [...]se and did their duty nobly

[Set]tled into a comparatively small minority [...] what then was left of the organization [wa]s under the control of those opposed to [the] war, and was at different times a series [of em]barrassment to the prosecution of the [wa]r. The nomination of Vallandigham the [an]ti-war resolutions of the Democratic Na[tion]al Convention of 1864 and other similar [pro]ceedings, no doubt prolonged the war [by] encouraging the public enemy

The second stage of republican success [clos]ed with the re-election of Lincoln and [the] triumphant close of the war Twenty [yea]rs have passed away since that time A [new] generation of men has come upon the [sta]ge of life The heroes of the war [have] now past the meridian of life A [num]ber of difficult questions have been [sol]ved every one by the republican party [and] each of them well solved Our errors [hav]e been on the side of generosity No [act] of violence no deprivation of rights no [act] of oppression mark the history of any [rep]ublican administration The southern [sta]tes have been restored to their place in [the] Union, and the only dish nor that I [...] the process has been the violation on their [par]t of the conditions of reconstruction and [thei]r denial by fraud and violence of the [civi]l rights of colored men Our currency has [not] only been restored to the specie basis [bu]t is confessedly better than it was or could [be] under the old ideas that prevailed Our [cre]dit is untarnished and stands higher in [the] money markets of the world than that [of] any other nation not even excepting [Gre]at Britain I submit to you whether [we] as republicans may not be justly proud [of] the results of republican administration?

SOME RECOLLECTIONS

[T]hose of us who have lived through the [pe]riod of this struggle and growth can recall [b]y a single glance of memory from the [pres]ent to the past the great and beneficial [cha]nge which has been produced in the United States since the democratic party was in [pow]er, but those of you who are about to as[sume] the reins of government will appreci[ate] the change more by reference to some [fig]ures taken by me from the statistics of the [c]ensus

[Fr]om 1860 to 1880 our population in[creas]ed from 31,400 000 to 50 100 000, [mor]e than 58 per cent

The number of manufacturing establish[ments] increased from 140 000 to 252 000

[The] capital employed in manufactures in[creas]ed from $1,000,000 to $2,709,000 or [nearl]y three fold. The wages paid to labor[ers inc]reased from $379,000,000 to $948,[...] or nearly three fold The value of [mater]ial used in manufactures increased [from $1,0]31,000,000 to $3,396,000,000, or [nearly] three fold and the value of pro[ducts fro]m $1,885,000,000 to $5,369,000,000, [or nearly] three fold.

This enormous improvement in our [...] is not confined to manufactures [...] it extends to agriculture and other [...] as well.

The number of farms in 1860 was 2,044,-000 while in 1880 it was 4 008,000 The number of acres in farms increased during that time from 407 000 000 to 536 000 000 and then value increased from $6 600 000 000 to $10 197 000 000, while the product of farming increased from $246 000 000 to $406 000 000

In 1860 we had 30,635 miles of railway In 1880 we had 84 [...] and [...] we have 127 000 miles

Our export of domestic product during the [...] amounted to $891,000,000 while in 1860 they amounted to $[...]7 000 000

Our national debt once an object of profound alarm is being paid off at the rate of $100 000 000 a year the excise or taxes being so lightly borne that no considerable portion of the people complain of them and no general demand is made for the repeal of any of them Indeed it is a marvellous feature of our condition that to repeal taxes is more unpopular than to retain them and some of these taxes are themselves a means of prosperity and not a burden complained of by any

THE TARIFF

Another practical difference between the two parties is the tariff question, and this grows out of the fundamental difference as to the powers of the national government The republican party believes that taxes on imported goods should be the chief source of national revenue and that in levying these taxes called duties they should be levied not only to raise revenue but to foster protect and diversify American labor and productions The democratic party favor duties for revenue only or exclusively and their leaders try all sorts of phrases to conceal their meaning This issue is getting clearly defined and is to-day the chief intermediate issue between the two parties. It is true that in Ohio Pennsylvania New York and Connecticut we have protective democrats as we used to have anti-slavery democrats or bank democrats or temperance democrats but the position of the democratic party is for tariff for revenue only and free trade as soon as possible Upon this issue Mr Carlisle was elected speaker of the house Mr Hurd was nominated in the Toledo district and Mr Converse was defeated in the Columbus district This was the issue that

MR CLEVELAND FORGOT IN HIS LETTER

Of acceptance in favor of his moral issue He prefers to pose as a moral reformer rather than as a free trader but all the same he would approve any free trade bill that would pass congress Who does not know that if Blaine is elected he will seek to maintain the protective policy which for twenty five years has been the policy of the republican party and who does not know that if Cleveland is elected we will have immediate and continual agitation for the reduction and abolition of all protective duties?

What is the object of the duties and how do they affect the different classes of our people? These questions have been so fully answered by General Robinson Mr Taylor and Major McKinley and others of Ohio that I will only state them in general terms The object of the productive duties is to encourage home production As the duty or tax is only levied on foreign goods it follows that to the extent of the tax it is a discrimination in favor of similar goods made here The domestic manufacturer is encouraged to make them here If he cost to him here is no greater than the cost of the foreign article with the tax added he can make it here and thus supply the market with the home product The advantage to the country at large is that he becomes a consumer of other home products such as food clothing etc instead of importing [...] If he has no such protection he must [...] [...] the wages of his labor or the cost of his materials or go to farming [...] [...] other pursuit The republican party [...] [...] that the protective duty while it [...] in the first instance [...] the cost of the article to the consumer [...] [...] [...] the diversity of employment [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...]

OUR DOMESTIC MANUFACTURES

Employing millions of [...] [...] great commerce of our supplies [...] [...] [...] and of the products of [...] [...] [...] By the protective duties is generally distributed among all classes [...] [...] shoemakers tailors merchants [...] this system our production has extended to all kinds of manufactures in metals and all textile fabrics giving a market for all raw materials and all food and necessaries of life

But the chief benefit of a protective duty is that it secures to the laboring men and women of the country good fair wages for honest labor I confess this is the main reason why I have uniformly supported protective duties It is not good policy in this country to have men and women work at the bare necessities of life without a chance to improve their condition to educate their children and share in the benefits of social life The man who labor must constitute the great mass of our people and with them must rest all political power The object of good government should be always to protect and foster their interest and to secure them good wages full employment and all the comforts and benefit of life consistent with all the rights of property guaranteed by the constitution Any disturbance of this protective policy creates doubt and stagnation deprives laboring men of honest employment and causes panics strikes reduction of wages, and organizes riot

The threat of the Morrison bill deprived thousands of men of employment and much stagnant the great productive industries of the country This fellow citizen is one strong reason why the democratic party ought not now to be trusted with the national power for democratic success means reduction of protective duties and [...] [...] overthrow of our manufacturing industries

THE DUTY ON WOOL

But they tell you and I [...] [...] [...] ther Geddes told you that I am responsible for the reduction of the duty on wool In this he is no worse than Governor Hoadley who last year made the reduction of the duty on wool in the tariff of 1883 the burden of his story He and Mr Converse and Judge Geddes and other leaders promised that the democrats would restore the wool tariff of 1867 [...] [...] this wool cry is the cheapest and meanest [...] [...] the democratic cry of Polk and Dallas and the tariff of 1842

Let us see who is responsible for the reduction of the duty on wool For several years prior to March 188[3] the surplus revenue of the national government exceeded the wants of the government more than a hundred million dollars a year In the summer of 1882 there was a general demand for the reduction of taxes and this was so far acquiesced in that the house of representatives passed a bill reducing internal taxes and a commission was appointed to make a report to congress for a revision and reduction of duties on imported goods. This commission took testimony all over the country and reported a bill which proposed a general reduction of 10 to 25 per cent ,and among other things a reduction of duty on wool and woolen goods This bill came before the senate, and at once a struggle occurred between the two great parties as to the extent of the proposed reduction on different kinds of goods The republicans, generally maintaining their protective principles, opposed the reduction of foreign goods that came into competition with American industries, and the democrats with scarcely an exception, favoring still greater reductions of all duties It was the old fight over again The votes show clearly the uniform tendency of the democratic party toward the reduction of duties and free trade, and of the republican party toward the maintenance of protective duties on articles that compete with our home industry. Among other changes made very important modifications in the tariff on woolen and cotton goods [...] [...] the duty [...] 000 in 1871 [...] 000 000 in 188[...] [...] quantity of wool [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] pound [...] [...] [...] that the tariff [...] [...] [...] little duty stand will [...] [...] [...] the gradual reduction of the price of wool [...] from domestic competition and not from foreign competition This opinion was only announced and I [...] [...] [...] As [...] it was possible under the rule of the senate I offered an amendment to the tariff commission bill restoring in substance the duties fixed by the act of 1867 which was entirely satisfactory to the wool grower

It appears from the Record which I have before me that this amendment of mine was voted for by a majority of the republicans present and voted against by all the democratic senators voting except three The debate shows that with General Logan and others I spoke and voted for the amendment Mr Bayard Mr Beck Mr Maxey and other democratic senators spoke and voted against it Some ten or twelve republican senators mostly from New England voted with the democrats and thus caused the reduction of the duty on wool Some of the democratic senators including Mr Bayard advocated the removal of all duties on wool and

THE GENERAL POSITION OF THE DEMOCRATS

Was that wool was a raw article of industry which should be made free I have always regarded the course upon that question of the New England senators who are good republicans as unfortunate for them inconsistent with their known tariff views and as a blunder which has had and will have in future legislation, injurious effects to their interests and perhaps to the interests of the country They supported their votes on the ground that American wool should bear like other articles a fair reduction of duties and their constituents as purchasers and consumers of the wool were interested in it and naturally desired to get it as cheaply as possible The democrats however voted against the duty on wool on the general principle that they were opposed to protective duties and especially on articles like wool which they claimed were raw articles and should be free It is true that after being defeated in every effort to restore the duty on wool I finally voted for the passage of the tariff bill Sometimes I have doubted whether that was a wise vote but my judgment then was and is now that as the bill contained an error on [...] [...] from taxation to our people [...] it embraced in its scope thousands of articles besides that of wool and that as on the whole the reduction on duties was made so as not to seriously embarrass American production except as to wool and iron I did not feel at liberty to vote against it and thus defeat it merely because two or three of its many provisions did not meet my judgment I also had so wholesome a fear that the democratic party would do so much worse in the next congress that I thought it better to take the evil with the good of the bill than to risk it in a democratic congress This fear was justified by the proposition in the Morrison bill in the present congress to reduce the duty on wool still more [...] 20 per cent [...] [sup]ported by Brother Hurd with the strong statement that if every democrat in Ohio [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] would not do it [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...]

HOAR ON BLAINE.

An Answer by Senator Hoar to Mr Carl Schurz.

FULL EXONERATION OF BLAINE

All the Charges in the Speech of Mr Schurz Examined —The Mulligan Letters Shown not to be Inconsistent with Honest Conduct

WORCESTER Mass Aug 21 1884 My Dear Young Friend I have received your kind and excellent letter With what you say of the right and duty of every citizen to obey the dictates of his individual conscience and judgment in casting his vote I fully agree If the principles of our party be in opinion to the public welfare if the party or its candidate be corrupt we ought to leave it Indeed it can be easily shown that the attitude of the party calling itself independent is such at this moment that every honest and conscientious man must ought to bolt and come over to us

You ask me if I have read Mr Schurz speech and what I think of it I have read it carefully Mr Schurz is a very able man His ability consists in his power of clear and skillful statement He has never shown his peculiar skill more conspicuously than in this speech Mr Blaine is to be congratulated that his ablest antagonist has put together the case against him where it can be met and encountered We may take it for granted that what Mr Schurz has not said in this speech against the personal honesty of Mr Blaine is not worth saving

Other stories more or less plausible are occasionally seen in the papers which a slight investigation and consideration easily refute But what Mr Schurz has not thought worth indorsing cannot be very important to answer

MR BLAINE'S BRILLIANT RECORD

Mr Blaine was speaker of the house of representatives six years It is not pretended that he ever made a dishonest ruling or even an erroneous ruling

He was a member of the house and senate for eighteen years No man brings against him the charge of a dishonest vote In looking back over that record crowded with great history and brilliant achievements do you find anything for which you or he need blush?

I was a member of the judiciary committee before whom the famous investigation was held in 1876 That testimony was taken by a sub committee of which I was not one But questions were several times brought before the full committee on appeal I heard Mr Blaine's explanation in the house and was of course familiar with the whole matter Mr Schurz admit and skillful speech had failed to change the opinion I then formed that the [...] against Mr Blaine was wholly false I have no fear of the judgment of any candid man who will take Mr Schurz indictment and Mr Schurz defense and read them intelligently with the entire testimony

Mr Blaine is not charged with any corrupt improper or wrong act whatever His direst accusers only claim that he offered to do something which he was never done Mr Schurz says of [...] truly that [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] not pretended that Mr Blaine ever offered to do anything wrong The real and ultimate charge is that he had a bad motive in two things that he said in letters One that when the 29th of June in seeking to purchase an interest in a railroad he said he thought he could be useful [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [illegible]

THE EVIDENCE OF AN EXPLANATION

[illegible]

So this reminding Fisher and Caldwell [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] which he prevented the coupling will [...] [...] to Arkansas another distinct proposition which would have killed it Everybody agrees that the ruling was right Everybody agrees that when Mr Blaine made it he had not the slight connection with the road or expectation of any, or the slightest knowledge of any person connected with it The question is whether in calling the attention of his friend Fisher to the fact that he had once by good fortune saved the bill from destruction he did it for the purpose of intimating that if he were received into the scheme he would do it again or whether he did it as most men who a public action has been beneficial to their friend do like to have the person benefited know it What man of [...] [...] who has had [...] getting [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] the private bill does not like to have the matter known or remembered by the person interested? It is one of the most gratifying things incident to a man charged with legislative duties to encounter a person to whom he has fairly and honestly rendered a service This would be especially true in writing to a person with whom the legislator sustained intimate personal or business relations What man who had been on a jury would think it improper if he met a man for whom he had decided an important case to say I was on the jury who saved your farm for you I repeat it is upon imputing "a corrupt motive to this one letter or these two letters written in one day that all there is left of the case against Mr Blaine hangs

Why Mr Blaine had been negotiating for the purchase of an interest in this road with Fisher and Caldwell for six months and neither of them ever heard of this ruling and it had not occurred to Mr Blaine to mention it to them Suppose he had been chairman of the committee who reported the bill or had made a speech in its favor and had said in his letter " Why you know I have always been a strong friend of this road and spoke for it and reported in its favor, and voted for it " What man whose eyes were not blood shot would find anything that was not simple, natural, and honest in such a thing?

'THE VERY ACME OF FOLLY '

Every other charge of official dishonesty against Mr Blaine is not only not proved, but is disproved—disproved by the confession of men who are now his earnest antagonists It is upon this one thing- the fact that he reminded a man with whom he was negotiating for an interest in a railroad that his action as speaker had once saved its endowment—that this whole charge of corruption rests To elect a man who did this is "blood-poisoning" for the republic! Better " said Mr Schurz "violence in the south another carnival of spoils in the federal offices a pragmatic disturbance of our [...] [...] [...] [...] president [...] [...] [...] In other words better [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] another [...] [...] better let a minority [...] [...] fraud [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] ruin the whole people better let [...] [...] our manufactures and poverty and distress invade every working man['s] home than to the man to be president who [...] [...] [...] interest in a railroad By the way this road which we have been talking about for six months is the very one that a ruling of mine long before you were connected with it and the first time I heard of it saved from destruction I [...] [...] condemnation of Blaine the very acme of uncharitableness and this talk the very acme of folly? This is the whole thing which Mr Schurz translate into official power offering itself for prostitution to make money

THE MULLIGAN LETTERS

But Mr Shurz thinks he finds a confession of guilt in Mr Blaine's manner of dealing with Mulligan and the letters Let us see

He says that when Mr Blaine read the letters to the house he dexterously mixed letters of different periods and about different subjects together so that no listener could on the spot make head nor tail to them But he could not prevent the letters as actually sent from being subsequently arranged according to dates and subjects etc It is true that Mr Blaine read the letters as he said quite miscellaneously But it is not true that the order in which he read them created or tended to create the least difficulty in understanding them The letters on which Mr Schurz founds his two charges are but four in number These are all he himself reads or quotes from in his whole speech Two of those were written the same day one referring to the Record where the facts stated in the other are found These were all read by Mr Blaine together With all Mr Schurz power of clear statement he does not put this matter any more clearly than it appears from the letters themselves in Mr Blaine's speech

But he says Mr Blaine refused to let the letters go into the hands of the officers of the house that they might be verified I never heard that such a thing was ever done by anybody who read a letter to the house If Mr Schurz means to say that the letters were not seen by the stenographers I do not now remember on what he can base such a statement But at any rate they were shown to Judge Black a zealous democrat and to Senator Carpenter an influential member of the portion of the republican party most opposed to his candidacy and to other gentlemen in high standing

THE EVIDENCE EXONERATED MR BLAINE

But Mr Schurz says he is amazed at Mr Blaine's energetic protest at the prying into his private affairs Here was a speaker charged with corruption Should he not have said Take everything search sift question let in the sunlight I think he forgets the circumstance The American people do not forget them The house has ordered the judiciary committee to inquire whether nine [...] railroad companies had complied with the law and properly applied the money land and bonds granted them by the government Some months after a further resolve was introduced inquiring whether the Union Pacific railroad had received certain bonds of the Little Rock & Fort Smith railroad at a price far beyond their value This grew out of a rumor that Mr Blaine was connected with a transaction of this kind He [...] the country will remember had just [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] Jefferson Davis was responsible for the horrors of Andersonville [...] [...] [...] chairman of the judiciary committee [...] the investigation to [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] [...] of which the chairman was a [...] with the transaction

Thomas A Scott who had been president of the Union Pacific railroad and whose great financial ability had brought up the value of its stock between 200 and 300 per cent testified that he received no regular commission for his service but that the bonds were his property and taken off his hands by the road and that Mr Blaine had no connection whatever with the matter direct or indirect near or remote It also appeared somewhere that these bonds were identified by character and I believe by numbers which showed that it was impossible that they could be identical with any in which Mr Blaine ever had an interest Under these circumstances it was proposed to extend the investigation to matters not committed to the committee by the house and to rake into Mr Blaine's private correspondence He was a prominent candidate for the presidency The fires of that fierce contest of 1876 were already blazing He felt, as every American citizen would feel under like circumstances inexpressibly outraged and indignant Mr Schurz has imagined what Washington would have done in some circumstances he has supposed I would like to have seen the honest wrath of George Washington if after the revolution a committee of Tories had proposed to rake into his private correspondence on such an errand

The supreme court of the United States has since expressly held in the case of Hill [...] Kilbourne that the house has no constitutional authority whatever to require the production of private papers in such a case There were many things in these letters which it must have been utterly mortifying to a proud spirited man to exhibit to the public without the least implication of guilt or dishonor There are disclosures of pecuniary embarrassment of ill success in a great transaction of danger of bankruptcy and financial ruin which the most honest man would struggle to conceal from public view

THE BLAINE MULLIGAN INTERVIEW

But Mr Schurz lays great stress upon Mr Blaine's interview with Mulligan The version of that interview given by Mulligan seems to me utterly improbable It is flatly and contemptuously contradicted by Mr Blaine Mulligan was contradicted in one very important particular where he testified to the injury of Mr Blaine by Elisha Atkins His apparent hostility to Blaine had been remarked long before He admitted that he thought Blaine had wronged him The narrative itself seems full of improbability

Mr Schurz' statement might give the impression which I acquit him of intending to give that Mr Blaine disclaimed meaning to say Mulligan falsified—"not at all —in relation to the whole interview He used that phrase in relation to one statement only The interview to which Mulligan testifies was partly in the presence of Foster and Atkins, and partly with him alone, the parties passing and repassing from one room to another It seems to me utterly unlikely that Mr Blaine would pass from calmness to distress and agony and back to calmness again in that way To those who have known that courageous and high-spirited gentleman there does not appear to be much of James G Blaine in Mulligan's story

REFUTATION OF CHARGES OF FALSEHOOD.

Mr Schurz charges Mr Blaine with falsehood and says he is discredited as a witness He seeks to maintain this grave accusation by two instances

First, he says, Mr. Blaine told the house of representatives that "the Little Rock road derived all its value from the state of Arkansas and not from congress." "In this he deliberately said what was not true " This Mr Schurz thinks is shown by Mr Blaine's own declaration in his letter that in his ruling he did a favor to Caldwell who was the builder of the road and who certainly was not the state of Arkansas Why how can Mr Schurz so misunderstand the matter? Mr Blaine was arguing to the house whose members fully understood the transaction that a member of the house had a perfect right to hold stock in the road because it got its franchise and property from Arkansas and not from congress He had stated in the same speech a few sentences before the facts exactly as Mr Schurz states them Congress made the grant to Arkansas to give to what road it pleased and Arkansas gave a part of it to the Fort Smith road Of course if the grant failed the road suffered Mr Schurz might as well charge a lawyer with lying who urged on the supreme court what he thought was the legal effect of a decision they had themselves just made as impute falsehood to Mr Blaine on account of his claiming to the house what was the legal effect of their own legislation which he had just recited to them

The other falsehood is said to be Mr Blaine's statement that he never had any of the bonds or stock of the road except on the same terms as they were bought in the market This is, he says Mr Schurz because Blaine writes to Fisher thanking him for the liberality and generosity with which he has dealt with him Blaine's writing to Fisher refers to a wholly different matter It refers to the allowance made to Mr Blaine as a commission for the sale to other people This it appears was made by Mr Blaine who guaranteed this stock to his friends in Maine and was afterward obliged to take it back There is no inconsistency whatever in the two statements

WHAT MR BLAINE'S ELECTION WILL DECLARE

Mr Schurz further declares that the election of Mr Blaine will be a declaration by the American people that honesty will be no longer one of the requirements of government I think Mr Schurz is entirely mistaken here also It will be a declaration on the part of the American people that they do not agree with him in his estimate of Mr Blaine It will be a declaration that they do not find in Mr Blaine's conduct and letters what Mr Schurz thinks he finds there It will be a declaration that they agree with Dr Clark when he paid Mr Blaine his glowing tribute of admiration and honor when all these facts were fresh and familiar It will be a declaration that they agree with Mr Curtis who declared that Mr Blaine's vindication of the principal charge against him was triumphant It will be a declaration that they agree with Mr Blaine's neighbors of his own district and his own state with the representatives of a vast majority of the republicans of the country who have three times since all these charges were made declared for him as their candidate for the presidency It will be a declaration that they agree with the governor and the legislature of Maine when they twice in succession made him senator It will be a declaration that they agree with Garfield when he made him secretary of state and with the almost half democratic senate when they without an instant's hesitation confirmed him for that high office

TRIUMPHANTLY ACQUITTED

Mr Schurz says the friends of Mr Blaine say his offense has been condoned They say no such thing They say he has been triumphantly acquitted They find him not guilty of these foul and injurious charges They say that in this complicated matter these repeated tokens of public confidence and affection ought to outweigh a million times the breath of rumor and of slander or even the possibility of an adverse interpretation of the meaning of a single phrase He says our answer is only the cry of party I think him mistaken in this also Your party is but the instrument by which freemen execute their will But it differs from other instruments in this It is an indispensable instrument It is an instrument made up of the men and practically of all the men who wish to accomplish the things you wish to accomplish and dear [...] to the prosperity honor and glory of [...] country It is an instrument itself [...] [...] intelligence judgment and [...] [...] [...]

A majority of that party must necessarily determine its plan of battle and the commander under whom it will fight And when you separate yourself from the party whose principles and purposes are yours you effectually abandon those principles and purposes You might as well say when the army of the Union was about to engage the enemy at Gettysburg or Lookout Mountain or Five Forks that you didn't approve the plan of battle or didn't like the general and for that day only you would go over to the enemy or fight it another place You cannot do it without being a deserter No matter whether you dislike Grant or Meade or Sheridan The battle on which the hope of union and humanity hangs is to be fought the reon the lines they form

No man knows this better than Grover Cleveland I am chosen he says to represent the plans purposes and policy of the democratic party? If elected he will do it James G Blaine is selected to execute the plans purposes and policy of the republican party And he will do it

GEORGE F HOAR

HOW THE BEDOUINS CONQUER THIRST

In an article on The Rescue of Chinese Gordon to be found in Open Letters of the September Century General R F Colston late of the Egyptian general staff says

In the waterless land water is the paramount question If it be asked how a large body of Bedouins like the ten thousand who nearly destroyed the British squares at Tamai manage to subsist the reason is plain In the first place they do not need the enormous trains required for a European army They are the most abstemious of men Each man carries a skin of water and a small bag of grain procured by purchase or barter from caravans Their camels and goats move with them supplying them with milk and meat and subsisting upon the scanty herbage and the foliage of the thorny mimosa growing in secluded wadies These people could live upon the increase of their flocks alone which they exchange readily for other commodities But being exclusive carriers and guides for all the travel and commerce that cross their deserts they realize yearly large amounts of money As to water they know every nook and hollow in the mountains away from the trails where a few barrels of water collect in some shaded ravine and they can scatter every man for himself to fill their waterskins On my first expedition near the close of the three years' drought, I reached some wells on which I was depending to find them entirely dry It was several days to the next wells But my Bedouin guides knew some natural reservoirs in the hills about six miles off So they took the water camels at nightfall, and came back before daylight with the water skins filled An invading army would find it hard to obtain guides and even if they did they must keep together, and could not leave the line of march to look for water Besides, the Bedouins, accustomed from infancy to regard water as most precious and rare, use it with wonderful economy Neither men nor animals drink more than once in forty-eight hours As to washing, they never indulge in such wasteful nonsense When Bedouins came to my camp, water was always offered them Their answer would frequently be. 'No, thanks, I drank yesterday ' They know too well the importance of keeping up the habit of abstemiousness. No wonder they can subsist where invaders would quickly perish."

GARFIELD TO YOUNG MEN.

Now, fellow citizens, a word before I leave you on the very eve of the holy day of God a fit moment to consecrate ourselves finally to the great work of next Tuesday morning I see in this great audience tonight a great many young men—young men who are about to cast their first vote I want to give you a word of suggestion and advice I heard a very brilliant thing said by a boy the other day up in one of our northwestern counties He said to me General I have a great mind to vote the democratic ticket That was not the brilliant thing I said to him Why? 'Why' said he, "my father is a republican and my brothers are republicans and I am a republican all over; but I want to be an independent man, and I don't want anybody to say 'that fellow votes the republican ticket just because his dad does,' and I have half a mind to vote the democratic ticket just to prove my independence I did not like the thing the boy suggested but I did admire the spirit of the boy that wanted to have some independence of his own

Now I tell you young man don't vote the republican ticket just because your father votes it Don't vote the democratic ticket even if he does vote it But let me give you this one word of advice as you are about to pitch your tent in one of the great political camps Your life is full and buoyant with hope now, and I beg you when you pitch your tent pitch it among the living and not among the dead If you are at all inclined to pitch it among the democratic people and with that party let me go with you for a moment while we survey the ground where I hope you will not shortly lie. It is a sad, place young man, for you to put your young life into It is to me far more like a graveyard than like a camp for the living Look at it! It is billowed all over with the graves of dead issues, of buried opinions, of exploded theories, of disgraced doctrines You can not live in comfort in such a place Why look here! Here is a little double mound I look down on it and read Sacred to the Memory of Squatter Sovereignty and the Dred Scott Decision " A million and a half democrats voted for that but it has been dead fifteen years—died by the hand of Abraham Lincoln and here it lies Young man, that is not the place for you

But look a little further Here is another monument, a black tomb and beside it as our distinguished friend said there towers to the sky a monument of four million pairs of human fetters taken from the arms of slaves and I read on its little headstone this Sacred to the Memory of Human Slavery " For forty years of its infamous life the democratic party taught that it was divine, God's institution They defended it they stood around it they followed it to its grave as a mourner But here it lies, dead by the hand of Abraham Lincoln dead by the power of the republican party dead by the justice of almighty God. Don't camp there young man

But here is another—a little brimstone tomb—and I read across its yellow face in lurid bloody lines these words Sacred to the Memory of State Sovereignty and Secession Twelve millions of democrats mustered around it in arms to keep it alive but here it lies shot to death by the million guns of the republic Here it lies its shrine burned to ashes under the blazing rafters of the burning confederacy It is dead! I would not have you stay in there a minute even in this balmy night air, to look at such a place

But just before I leave I discover a new-made grave a little mound short The grass had hardly sprouted over it and all around I see torn pieces of paper with the word fiat on them and I look down in curiosity, wandering what the little grave is and I read on it Sacred to the memory of the Rag Baby nursed in the brain of all the fanaticism of the world rocked by Thomas Ewing George H Pendleton, Samuel Cary and a few others throughout the land But it died on the 1st of January 1879 and $140 000 000 of gold that God made and not fiat power he upon its little carcass and keep it down forever

Oh young man come out of that! That is no place in which to put your young life Come out and come over into this camp of liberty of order of law of freedom of justice of all that is glorious under these night stars

Is there any death here in our camp? Yes! yes Three hundred and fifty thousand soldiers the noblest band that ever trod the earth died to make this camp a camp of glory and of liberty forever But there are no dead issues here There are no dead ideas here Hang out our banner from under the blue sky this night until it shall sweep the green turf under your feet It hangs over our camp Read away up under the stars the inscription we have written on it lo! these twenty five years

Twenty five years ago the republican party was married to liberty and this is our silver wedding fellow citizens A worthily married couple love each other better on the day of their silver wedding than on the day of their first espousals and we are truer to liberty to-day and dearer to God than we were when we spoke our first word of liberty Read away up under the sky across our starry banner that first word we uttered twenty five years ago! What was it? Slavery shall never extend over another foot of the territory of the great west Is that dead or alive? Alive thank God, for ever more! And truer to-night than it was the hour it was written. Then it was a hope, a promise a purpose To-night it is equal with the stars—immortal history and immortal truth

Come down the glorious steps of our banner Every great record we have made we have vindicated with our blood and with our truth It sweeps the ground and it touches the stars. Come here, young man and put in your young life where all is living and where nothing is dead but the heroes that defended it —From a speech delivered in 1879

The little brother came quietly into the parlor where Mr Featherly was making an evening call, and after looking eagerly around remarked to his sister " Aunt Jane is mistaken " What is it? his sister asked pleasantly patting the dear little fellow on the head while Featherly gazed at the two in wrapt admiration "I don't see any cap " he replied. "but Aunt Jane just said that you were in the parlor setting your cap for Mr Featherly

The word " microbe, " now so commonly used was coined by Mr. Charles Sedillot, of Strasburg in February 1878 in a paper which he read on the application of M Pasteur's discoveries to surgery Coming from the Greek words of mikros, small and bios, life it aptly describes the thing intended. In replying to M Sedillot, M Pasteur used the word twice, and scientific men have since generally adopted it

Fifty years ago there was a boy in Africa who was taken prisoner in one of the fierce wars between the tribes, and was carried away from his home to be sold as a slave. After being sold and resold, now for sugar and again for rum, he was finally carried away in a slave-ship A British cruiser captured the slaver. The boy is now Bishop Crowther, black bishop of Africa for England

The Oregonian.

MONDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 21, 1884.

THE STATE FAIR.

At last the fairs of the State Agricultural Society, which have met with reverses for years, have dwindled down to conspicuous failure. The late fair was not worthy of the name. From year to year the fair has been going down, till this time it reached a deep beneath which there can hardly be a lower deep. Many untoward circumstances, continuing from year to year, have combined to bring this result. It would be easy to censure the managers, who doubtless have committed mistakes, but would it be entirely just? The cause of the failure lies deeper. The managers have done as well as they could. The simple fact is that Oregon does not want a State Agricultural Society, and don't care about an annual fair. In the opinion of the people the fair is of no use or profit. Hence they do not attend it or support it. In the long run—and these fairs have been dragging on during a good many years—the instinct of the people, or their judgment, if any one likes the word better, is about right. We are prepared, therefore, to accept their conclusion that the fair is practically useless, and to add that, as it is now dead, it ought to be left to rest undisturbed.

So little interest has been taken in the fair that it has never been a credit to the state. The exhibits of general industry have never been worth the name. Exhibits of agricultural products, even, have usually been meager, and often poor. You could find as good at a green grocer's in any town in the state. Threshing machines, wagons and plows you may find at the warehouse of any dealer in agricultural implements. Of stock there have been some good, though small showings; but the number who take an interest in blooded stock, or who have money to invest in it, is comparatively few. Horse races are well enough for those who want them, but then one does not need to go so far to see a horse race, and there are people who can support life with tolerable serenity without ever going to see one.

Ten to twenty years ago more interest seemed to be taken in our state fairs than has been witnessed in later years, and the cause is not far to seek. The chief feature of interest in earlier days was the social one. People who had known each other as pioneers, who had crossed the plains together, took this opportunity of seeing each other. They went to the state fair in the hope of finding there as many as possible of their old associates. Thus the state fair became an important social event. Modes of travel were very slow. People could not go and come long distances with ease and quickness as they do now, and large numbers seldom stirred out except to attend the state fair, which was the event of the year. But all this has changed. The first settlers are rapidly disappearing. The men and women of Yamhill and Benton, who went to the state fair chiefly to meet their old friends of Lane or Multnomah, who had been their associates in the journey across the plains, are now few. The younger generation knows little or nothing of these romantic and almost sacred associations and, since railroads have been built, affording opportunity to come and go at all times, they do not need the state fair as a means of feeding the wants of their social natures. Hence as a social gathering, the state fair has lost its old interest. As an industrial exhibit it never was important enough to be attractive.

An effort, it is said, will now be made to induce the legislature to take the state fair off the hands of the society and keep it up by annual appropriations. Believing that the state should confine itself to its legitimate functions, THE OREGONIAN cannot second this proposition. If the state is to pay the charge of supporting the fair there will be a call for more and more money every year, and, as the people have plainly indicated that they do not care much about the fair, it may as well now be suspended, at least for a term of years. Then, when the memory of the present failure has died out, and the industries of the state have reached a basis that will create a demand for a state fair, a new effort may be made and a successful result attained. The managers of the late fair have been greatly censured for using all the receipts to take up a note given for old debts; but it does not appear that they were greatly to blame. Only they ought to have given notice to all whom it might concern that no purses or premiums would be paid till enough money had first been set apart to pay the old debts. Then nobody would have been deceived. As it is, a good many people feel that they have been "bunkoed." Just now is an excellent time to disarm criticism and mollify those who think they have been victimized. This can be done by resolving to die. Human nature is pitiful, it tolerates no quarrel with the dead.

BLAINE'S RECENT LETTER.

Inasmuch as James G. Blaine and wife have seen fit to let the public know that they were united by a secret marriage they are open to censure for their conduct in having made that alliance, since a secret marriage never can be free from the charge of grave impropriety, nor, even in the best circumstances, from a kind of immorality. If the relations between a man and a woman are those of husband and wife society has a right to know the fact and not only so, but it is wrong to conceal it. Secret marriages, it should not be necessary to say, may give rise to so many social disorders of a serious nature including immoralities that society has a right to protect itself against, and hence to avoid secrecy witnesses to a marriage are required by the laws of all well-regulated states. As a further means of publicity many of the states require the obtainment of license, and all of them should require it. A secret marriage in Kentucky, without a license, is a legal as well as a social offense, though such marriage, in the absence of a statute expressly declaring it null, is perfectly valid. While the Blaine marriage is inexcusable, there is this, however, to be said in extenuation of the conduct of the parties, that they regarded it as a marriage in good faith, and to guard against possible embarrassments, within less than a year, confirmed it. It is said already that Blaine's statement fully justifies the publication of the Indianapolis Sentinel, which journal he has sued for libel, but this is only an assertion inspired by rank partisanship, and would not be made in any similar case where the parties were merely private citizens. The Sentinel's charge was that Blaine seduced an innocent girl, and after betraying and despoiling her, was such a scoundrel as to refuse her legal redress by making her his wife and giving legitimacy to her child, till a loaded shotgun in the hands of her father forced him to do it. This is denounced by Blaine as "utterly and abominably false." It devolves now on the paper to prove its assertions or take the consequences. That issue, however, is a personal one between the parties and is of small consequence to the public. It may be left to take care of itself. What is apparent now is the fact on the one hand that Blaine was guilty in his youth of a serious impropriety, and on the other hand that a grossly exaggerated and libellous story has been made out of it. Candor can neither withhold censure from him nor allow an excuse to his libeller.

But while he cannot escape censure for having entered into a secret marriage there is this to be said in his favor, namely, that he takes the blame wholly upon himself; he does not attempt to cast it or any part of it upon another; the woman with whom he formed the alliance he has ever acknowledged and honored as his wife, and they have walked the journey of life faithfully together. Herein is where his conduct comes in striking contrast with that of another candidate for the presidency who formed a connection with a woman to whom he was attracted and with whom he lived for a time and then threw her off, refusing her the legal redress of making her his wife and giving legitimacy to her child, and finally permitting his friends to defend him by throwing all the blame on the mother of his boy and calling her a harlot. Blaine did his wife no wrong. Whatever error he committed was an offense against society; and, though a secret marriage is not to be excused, yet this one resulted in no harm either to society or to any individual. But Cleveland offended not only against law, against decency and against social order, but wronged a woman to whom he has refused the redress of honorable marriage, and still permits his son to go upon the world under the brand of bastardy. THE OREGONIAN is not excusing Blaine. It has a particular detestation of social irregularities and sexual immoralities. But yet it must say that no person who supports Cleveland and intends to vote for him has any right whatever to speak with severity of Blaine's conduct in this matter, or, in particular, to urge it as a reason why he shall not be elected president, till Cleveland has first made Maria Halpin his wife and taken her and his son to his home. Should Cleveland be elected Maria Halpin, who is every whit as good as he is, ought to be mistress of the White House.

EQUALITY IN SEXUAL VIRTUE.

An English writer in a criticism of Anthony Trollope's autobiography says that, while Mr Trollope was thoroughly in earnest in wishing to teach a high morality by his tales, his morality was of a very limited kind. "He hardly even teaches so much as that men should be pure as well as women, or that women should be courageous as well as men." But it cannot be denied that Mr Trollope's teachings on this subject are in accordance with the views of a majority of his countrymen, though there are signs that the old order of morality is changing, and that the critic referred to stands for the type of a new school of thinkers, who are endeavoring to promulgate what they understand by the higher morality. In theory doubtless equality in virtue has been recognized in the western world ever since the Founder of Christianity refused to sanction the punishment by a cruel death of an erring woman, except at the hands of an accuser who could prove himself to be immaculate. But like other doctrines of the same teacher, this doctrine of the equality of the sexes in virtue has since fallen into practical desuetude. It is not the ethical creed of the modern club and drawing room, if, indeed, it may truly be said to be the creed of the modern pulpit.

The reluctance to acknowledge equality in virtue arises principally from three causes. The first applies to married people only. In order to relieve the state from the support of illegitimates, it is necessary that the husband should feel sure that the children of his wife are his children, otherwise he would be unwilling to provide for them, and the family would be destroyed. The second cause is a physiological one. The consequences of immorality are more perilous for women than for men, both in their more obvious nature and in respect to an attribute of womanhood which appears to have escaped the notice of most writers on the subject, but which Dora Greenwell says "serves more than any other to draw a sharp line of separation between her career and that of man." We allude to that law of her nature which compels her, as it were, to bring the whole of her being to whatever at the moment engages her. By an effort of will a man can make his heart and intellect run in separate tracks, he can be in love, in grief, and yet attend to what is before him—can parcel himself out to business, even to study. Not so a woman. She moves together if she moves at all, and it is probably owing to this oneness of nature that a woman, when once depraved, becomes so complete a wreck, so incapable of self-restitution, so incompetent, with whatever help, to rise from her own ruins. She has not kept, as men good and bad do, something in reserve." But this oneness of women has some relation of cause and effect to the third reason for the existence of a dual standard of virtue. What is really at the root of the reluctance to acknowledge equality in virtue is the subjection of women, the desire that women should remain in a state of tutelage. This is partly the fault of women, and it arises in part from the ardor of their nature, which is exhibited in women of the highest intellectual gifts in the passionate manner in which they fasten, even fling themselves upon art or knowledge. As Dora Greenwell says, "They can only possess a thing, it seems, through being possessed by it." The instinct of possessing some sort of property in women, which lingers with a strong persistency on the civilized world, does not belong to one sex alone.

But there is another cause for the existence of the dual moral law, and that is a lack among men of a thirst after manlike purity for its own sake. In sexual virtue as in other things the husband and wife, the man and woman, really stand or fall together.

> The woman's cause is man's; they rise or sink
> Together, dwarfed or godlike, bond or free.

All legislative or social conventions which ignore or contradict a common standard of virtue, which seek to secure the chastity of one sex while encouraging the unchastity of the other, not only bear the brand of iniquity but are foredoomed to failure. The evidence of history on this point is conclusive, though the appeal to history ought to be superfluous in a question of every day observation and plain common sense. As a writer in a late number of the Westminster Review says "the man who sets little store by the virile virtue of purity pays for his error by a lessening hold upon other virtues—virtues which are vulgarly accounted of a more masculine or vertebrate order, such as honor, truth, love of fair play, generosity and magnanimity. His religion becomes a lie, his moral code a specious hypocrisy, he loses the sense of the sacredness of personal rights, whole classes of the community cease for him to be persons at all; they become things to be regulated as he regulates gin-shops or factory chimneys or sewers. The principles which govern his procedure are cynical principles and the constituent elements of cynicism being cruelty, animalism and disbelief in any higher nature than its own, it is needless to add that the methods inspired by it are not methods tending in the direction of the more humane and chivalrous virtues." The animal in the man makes the coward in the woman, and the two combined sap the foundation of states. Male laxity has for its inevitable concomitant female levity.

It is to be hoped that the attention which has already been, and is destined perhaps to be still more, widely called to this subject in the present political campaign, will be understood as the beginning of a national revolt against inequality in virtue. It would be a thousand pities if it should turn out to be a case of "chastity for politics only." For the spread of these political scandals will be dreadfully demoralizing if it does not emphasize the requirement, which decency as well as religion makes, that men should be pure as well as women.

John Hailey has been nominated for delegate in congress by the democrats of Idaho. The convention that nominated him voted down anti-Mormon resolutions, hoping thereby to secure for their candidate the Mormon vote. In this they will probably succeed, and Idaho therefore may be expected to go democratic. The Mormon vote of the territory is becoming very large, and is inclined to favor the democratic party anyhow, since that party has been regarded by the Mormons as more lenient toward their "peculiar institution" than the republican. Mr. Hailey formerly served as delegate during a term or two, though the present delegate, Singiser, is a republican. He was not elected, however, on a party issue. His success was due to the fact that he got the entire vote of northern Idaho on the issue of cutting off that part of the territory and attaching it to Washington.

The princess of Wales has a tender heart, evidently, but she may be mistaken in the selection of objects of tenderness. "If I have saved one cat from misery," she said at a public gathering the other day, "I shall feel that I have done something." There are objects of commiseration among her people that are of more value than many cats, and if she saved any of them from misery she might feel that she had done something more.

Some days ago the New York World published an article, under great typographical display, which asserted that Hamilton Fish, Grant's secretary of state, would vote for Cleveland. This has been widely reproduced by the democratic press. Mr. Fish, however, on seeing the article in the World, addressed a letter to that paper which it published September 14, saying that he had been misrepresented, that he was "not prepared to put the government of the nation in democratic hands." He added: "Being out of politics, I did not feel called upon to announce through the public press for whom I may vote, but as, without any wish of mine I am thus brought before the public, I may add that I expect to vote for Mr. Blaine."

A wool-grower writes to ask if the price of wool is not affected by the duty, and whether it would not be greatly to the interest of our wool-growers if the former rate of duty were restored. In Oregon the duty makes little difference either way. The reduction of duty on wool, effected by the act that passed the last congress, was quite small, and in all probability if the amount were restored the Oregon wool-growers would never know it from any change in the market. Again, wool is governed in price more largely by its distance from the manufacturer and the cost of transportation than by the duty, and hence wool of like quality sells lower in Oregon than in London, because it is further from the manufacturer.

"Why does THE OREGONIAN censure Hendricks for making speeches in his own behalf, yet have no censure for Logan, who also is making speeches for himself?" This is the question propounded by a contemporary, which would be more esteemed but for its uncandid dullness. THE OREGONIAN has not censured Hendricks for making speeches. It is proper enough for him or Logan either, or for Blaine, Cleveland, Butler, St. John or Belva Lockwood, to make speeches. It was the blatant demagogism of the speeches made by Hendricks that was censured, not the fact that speeches were made.

The experience of last night ought to suggest to the common council the necessity of enacting an ordinance to prohibit the use of the docks along the river, especially in the central parts of the city, say from G street to Jefferson, as depots for the storage of hay, wool, oils and other combustible materials. Last night's fire was the fruit of this imprudence in the use of the docks, and there ought to be no repetition of such a fire from a like cause.

In a recent speech General Butler referred to his father as an officer in the war of 1812. Captain Butler was stationed at Burlington, Vt., and while there was a lawless, ruffianly man, who did not hesitate to duck in a horse pond and groom with an oaken or hickory towel any man who opposed him. Gov. A. B. Nettleton has sold the Minneapolis Tribune to A. J. Blethen, one of the owners of the Kansas City Journal, and [illegible] Haskell of the chief owner of the Boston Herald. The price paid was about $200,000. The new owners will take charge within a few weeks.

In Idaho the republicans have nominated Theodore F. Singiser for delegate in congress.

Efforts to catch the [illegible] thus far failed, but it may be that a [illegible] coming will come after awhile.

Under the heading "Stack your Gr[ain]" [illegible] lamette valley exchange offers the fo[llowing] excellent practical suggestions: The [illegible] past week, we should think, would [illegible] farmers a lesson from which they [illegible] in the future. In this country whe[re] [illegible] fall wheat that ripens quite early [illegible] wheat that comes on later, the harve[st] [illegible] some time, and the habit of leaving [illegible] shock until a threshing machine ca[n] [illegible] thresh it, often results in the loss of [illegible] at least a great damage to it, as ha[s] [illegible] case this year. Now if the farmers [illegible] their grain the risk of a loss by ra[in] [illegible] avoided, while the expense would [illegible] if any more. The early grain could [illegible] made secure and safe by stacking [illegible] then the later grain gathered an[d] [illegible] and then the threshing done at [illegible] time, when it was the most convenient [illegible] way the danger from loss by ra[in] [illegible] avoided and the farmers would not [illegible] and worried every time a cloud p[assed]. As the custom now is of leaving [illegible] standing in the shock until a machine [illegible] cured, it often requires two jobs of t[hreshing] [illegible] the same farm, one for the fall grain [illegible] for the spring, or else leave the first [illegible] the shock until the last is ready, there [illegible] a risk of damage and loss. There a[re] [illegible] grain standing to-day in the shock [illegible] been for nearly a month. This grain [illegible] have been stacked if it could not [illegible] threshed before. In a country as lia[ble] [illegible] as it is in Oregon it will not do to [illegible] chances. People can't afford it whe[n] [illegible] any way to avoid it. It costs too mu[ch] [illegible] grain to then lose it by any mismanagement. Therefore we ought to follow the go[od] [illegible] ern custom and stack our grain. It [illegible]

Accounts are received of robbery and destruction of sheep camps in the Blue mountains From the Wall and Upper Rock creek country, where the thefts have been mostly committed this summer, there are two more outrages to report While George Gray's herder was out with his sheep last Wednesday his camp was raided and a needle gun and a supply of cartridges were stolen In the same neighborhood Crocket Kirk's herder returned to camp one evening and found that his temporary home had been burned up, and probably the camp was robbed before being fired Efforts to catch the thieves have thus far failed, but it may be that a day of reckoning will come after awhile

Under the heading "Stack your Grain," a Willamette valley exchange offers the following excellent practical suggestions The rain of the past week, we should think, would teach the farmers a lesson from which they would profit in the future. In this country where we have fall wheat that ripens quite early and spring wheat that comes on later, the harvest lasts for some time, and the habit of leaving grain in the shock until a threshing machine can come and thresh it, often results in the loss of the crop, or at least a great damage to it, as has been the case this year Now if the farmers would stack their grain the risk of a loss by rain would be avoided, while the expense would be but little, if any more The early grain could be cut and made secure and safe by stacking, and then the later grain gathered and stacked, and then the threshing done all at one time, when it was the most convenient. In this way the danger from loss by rain will be avoided and the farmers would not be troubled and worried every time a cloud passed over As the custom now is of leaving the grain standing in the shock until a machine can be secured, it often requires two jobs of threshing on the same farm, one for the fall grain and one for the spring, or else leave the first standing in the shock until the last is ready, thereby running a risk of damage and loss There are fields of grain standing to-day in the shock that have been for nearly a month This grain ought to have been stacked if it could not have been threshed before In a country as liable to rain as it is in Oregon it will not do to take such chances. People can't afford it when there is any way to avoid it. It costs too much to raise grain to then lose it by any mismanagement. Therefore we ought to follow the good old eastern custom and stack our grain It will pay

WESTERN OREGON

Much sickness is reported at Brownsville

The Lane County Agricultural Society will open at Eugene City September 25th and continue three days

Hon B B Cochran of Lane county is in Benton county, says the Eugene State Journal, inspecting the rolling stock and equipments of the Oregon Pacific railroad He is one of the inspectors appointed by Governor Moody

A Harrisburg paper says We have been informed, that nearly all of the grain, east of and between Albany and Brownsville, has been harvested and secured before the late rains, consequently there will be no losses in that section

In some sections in the forks of the Santiam in Linn county, one-third of the crop is still out, in other sections well nigh half all of which is more or less damaged In some fields the stocks are well capped and the grain is not injured except the capping sheaves. Had farmers shocked their grain well and capped each shock with two sheaves, as they used to do in the eastern states, no very great damage would have been done by the unprecedented rains.

This afternoon a light shower fell and more rain may be expected before Monday

REV. E. W. CASWELL.

First Sermon of the New Pastor of Grace M. E. Church.

SUBJECT: THE TRANSFIGURATION.

Lessons Taught by this Remarkable Event—A Few Words to the Congregation.

Rev. Mr. Caswell, the newly appointed pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal church, preached his introductory sermon in the Scandinavian Metedist Episcopal church yesterday morning. He prefaced his sermon with a few introductory remarks regarding his new relations as pastor of the church. He said in substance: The members of Grace church have not only recently separated from one of the ablest and most effective pastors in Methodism, but you have been led to depart from the religious society where many of you were spiritually born and educated. The severance of these ties has cost you some severe pangs. Old associations are cherished among the soul's richest treasures, even the church edifice itself becomes doubly sacred for its many scenes of spiritual triumph. You have just come from these partings. Your hearts are tender with sympathy and love. I would not check these holy affections. There is room in your hearts for these cherished memories side by side with your aspirations for a wider usefulness and grander achievements.

I come to you to-day unknown and untried, but I trust God has sent me, and he makes no misfits. I come in the order of Methodism, to take up the work of one of God's ambassadors, who has been called to another field of labor. I trust there will be no break in the thread, no serious change in the plans marked out by your former pastor.

In eastern countries the tapestry weavers ofttimes are unable to complete the beautiful pieces of workmanship, and as one dies another picks up the thread and weaves on after the original design. So I trust I may pick up the thread dropped by the fingers of Brother Izer and weave on after the beautiful pattern given by the divine designer, weaving in the rose of Sharon, Christ the Redeemer, and the lily of the valley, Christ the resurrection; weave out intemperance and weave in sobriety; weave out sin and weave in holiness, until the world becomes like our glorious pattern, Christ Jesus.

THE SERMON.

The subject of Mr. Caswell's first sermon was "The Transfiguration." His text was: Mark ix:2—"And after six days Jesus taketh with him Peter, and James and John, and leadeth them up into a high mountain, apart by themselves, and he was transfigured before them."

He said: Jesus, who loved the retirement and solitariness of the mountains, is about to ascend the slopes of Tabor, where is to occur one of the most memorable scenes in his eventful life. He takes with him the three disciples who are to go down deepest in his sorrows, who are the best qualified to appreciate and publish to the world the glory of that holy mount. It is evening. The western sun gilds the Mediterranean and purples the mountains. They slowly climb the mountain, till the valleys and villas are lost from view and the noise of earth is silent. There, in one of the mountain recesses, Jesus bows in prayer. The disciples, weary with the ascent and the toils of the day, retire a little from the Savior and sink into a drowse. While thus partially asleep, they behold the face of Jesus upturned in prayer, and suddenly his countenance beams forth with the splendors of the sun at mid-day. His garments are permeated by this glory and they are more brilliant than crystals of snow, whiter than any fuller on earth could whiten, while rapt in wonder their astonishment is increased at beholding two celestial beings descending from heaven, and taking their seat on either side of Jesus. Their quickened spiritual knowledge tells them it is Moses and Elijah. They listen with trembling delight at the strange conversation. It is about the decease of Jesus at Jerusalem, about the scourging, the crown of thorns, the cross of Calvary, the victory over death and its relation to sinners on earth and saints in heaven. Peter's soul was so full of glory that he could wait no longer. He must speak and yet he knew not what to say. He proposed the building of three tabernacles that these heavenly visitants might remain with them on the Mount.

But suddenly they are gone. God speaks and they saw no man save Jesus only. It is proper to inquire what were the lessons of the transfiguration? All of them may not be fathomed. How much it comforted and strengthened Jesus we cannot tell. How much it profited Moses and Elias we shall know hereafter. What we know most about it is its effect upon the three witnesses, and through them upon the early church and upon all Christians to the remotest time.

I. The transfiguration strengthened the faith of the disciples.

First, in the divinity of Christ. The disciples were accustomed to think of Jesus as the babe of Bethlehem, as the carpenter of Nazareth. They also knew of the prophecies which declared the majesty and glory of the coming Messiah. Could this humble Nazarene be the divine son of God? Was he not one of the prophets? They performed miracles as does he. See, he grows weary and sleeps like any man. Can it be that a God can be so much like a man? And only a few days ago he told them of his approaching death and sufferings and they rebuked him. What! a God die! He who is to redeem Israel, can he die? And they often wondered and were troubled.

But now behold him "pavilioned with splendor," a pillar of light; the hidden glory bursts forth; his body canot veil it longer; his raiment cannot shut it in. The author of light shines forth brighter than the sun, whiter than snow, more dazzling than all the suns of all the systems. The disciples are transfixed with wondering and admiring awe. They who were eye-witnesses of his majesty, knew ever after that the story of his divinity was not a cunningly devised fable.

Second in his equality with the Father, he might be divine—the only begotten son—but was he one in power and existence with God? Did he not exaggerate when he said "I and my Father are one?" Was he not mistaken when he said, "Before Abraham was, I am?" and again, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father?" Were not these claims almost presumptuous for a being in human form to make? But listen, a voice comes from the excellent glory. It is the voice of God, corroborating all that Jesus has asserted. God speaks and says to those disciples: "This is my beloved son, in whom I am well pleased, hear ye him."

If the prince of doubters could have witnessed this scene, he would have cried out, "My Lord and my God." But should he not receive the testimony of three unimpeached eye-witnesses and at least be willing to look for himself and behold "the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ."

Their faith was strengthened in Jesus as the author of a new dispensation, supplementing or displacing the old. Jesus had spoken some strange words concerning the law and the prophets, such as love is the fulfilling of the law. He epitomized the ten commandments, reducing them to two. He took the liberty of interpreting them and spiritualizing them, proclaiming sin to be in the very thought.

"The old law says an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, but I say unto you, love your enemies, etc." Who is this that seeks to modify, nay, even change the apparent meaning of the laws of Jehovah? Who is this who seeks to take his place at the head of all the holy prophets as the one great prophet in whom the predictions of 4000 years find a fulfillment. We are told that he came not to destroy the law and the prophets, but to fulfill. Let the monumental shaft of the ten commandments, stand forever as the only manuscript of God to man, the autograph of the Almighty; glorified by the rising sun of righteousness. Its granite letters stand forth in characters of living light, its spiritual meaning brought out between the lines. Whoso hateth his brother is a murderer.

Let the entire cathedral of the old testament remain. Christ would not destroy its windows nor demolish its walls. He would flood it with light and transfigure it with glory. For 4000 years it has served a grand purpose of God's people.

To-day we delight to walk through its sacred aisle and gaze at its ancient splendors. Yonder behold the dazzling brilliancy of the window of prophecy. All its many pieces of variously colored glass are transformed into a beautiful mosaic row. We'll not destroy that window. Let it stand in history and memory, ever speaking of divine omniscience and wisdom to all intelligencies. Behold the window of the Books of Moses. How the old words shine with new meaning.

Gaze at the window entitled Israel in the Wilderness, and as the sun penetrates it you look through and you see that Jesus is our manna, our rock in the desert, our healer lifted up like the serpent, our deliverer from bondage, and our Canaan of eternal rest.

Yonder is a window of types, the shew bread [illegible] the holy place, the bleeding victim is [illegible] How eloquent, how full of infinite [illegible] that window has become. I see as I gaze another victim, his blood flows, more precious than the blood of all the sacrifices of 4000 years—it is Calvary's lamb.

But you need not worship in that temple longer. You may visit it. Walk out with the light of eternal day and you find that the whole universe is a temple and the glory of God is the light therefore, shining in the face of Jesus Christ. Jesus has lit up every corner of space with divine love and through the light he radiates. We see not through the mediums of the past Moses and Elijah surrender their commission to Jesus, uniting with John the Baptist in saying he must increase, but we must decrease.

II. The transfiguration strengthened their Christian life, preparing them for future trials and labors. Tabor was a mount of supreme blessing. Their souls were never before so filled with holy joy; they would never return to earth again, but would have the crown without the cross, the glory without the suffering. How little they interpretted the real value of that thrilling scene. They did not see that Gethsemane and Calvary were so near Tabor. Little did they think of the demon he cast out at the foot of the mountain. The toil and pain, the persecution and martyrdom which awaited them was far from their thoughts. But the glory of Tabor shone through all the dusky valleys of sorrow illuminating them with unearthly brightness to the latest hour of their lives. Thirty years after, while defending Christianity, Peter gazed back to this transcendent scene, and was enabled to affirm that he had not followed cunningly devised fables, for we were eye witnesses of his majesty. We heard the voice from the excellent glory, and the sound of that voice will never die away nor the glory grow dim. Its memory strengthened John on Patmos, James when he gave his life for Jesus at the hands of Herod, and enabled Peter to sleep peacefully between the soldiers in prison. We observe then that to prepare the soul to meet suffering was one of the lessons of the holy mount. Shall we attempt to explain how this was accomplished? Was it not by so filling the soul with the divine that self-denial and sacrifice could be endured with little pain. It gave God no pain to deny self. It is no sacrifice to divine nature to be doing, giving, loving his creatures. This is the natural current of his being, forgetfulness of self is his highest glory. Adam possessed this nature in the garden, till sin changed the whole drift of his being. Instead of the fountain of sparkling waters, flowing outward toward others, it turned inward toward self. Self-denial now reverses the current of being, turning it away from self, which is a painful process, costing greater conflicts than the overthrow of cities or empires.

Christ could not suffer till he entered the human, the fallen nature tainted by sin. Now he struggles and fights in the wilderness and on the mountain. Now suppose the divine nature should overwhelm the human, flooding it with light, filling it with glory, then the human or lesser is swallowed up in the divine, and you are only sensible of the glory. Now suffering is glory. This was Christ's condition on the mount. The inward purity and holiness permeated the human, exalted it if you please, till he could talk with the celestial visitors about the sorrow of Gethsemane and the shame of Calvary with ineffable ecstacy.

The one great blessing of the transfiguration was the exaltation of the divine, both in Jesus and in the disciples, and when we search the spiritual documents we can look forward and in anticipation glory in tribulations and take pleasure in distresses. Here labor is rest and pain is sweet. Here sacrifice is pleasure. The missionary is happier toiling among savages than among friends.

III. The transfiguration strengthened the hopes of the disciples. We have not space to elaborate this part of our theme. A wide field of vision opens before us here. Here were revealed truths which Socrates and Plato and millions in all ages desired to discover. The immortality of the soul, that hope which has throbbed in every human bosom, the resurrection of the body, the intermediate state, future recognition—all these longing hopes, became to the disciples a positive certainty. No doubt afterward. We have seen the faces of two of earth's heroes who passed away from the scenes of earth centuries before. We heard their voices. We knew by our quickened spiritual knowledge who they were. Of glorious doctrine of the recognition of friends in heaven. We shall know as we are known.

These are some of the lessons suggested by this holy mount. Since that night of vision Christians in all ages have beheld his glory, not by making pilgrimages to Palestine and climbing Tabor's side, but in their solitary musings, in their daily toils, while leading a soul to God or in the secret place. Suddenly the place has been made glorious. Jesus has appeared the one altogether lovely, and the glory has transfigured life, and made its darkest hours radiant with light. How small the world appeared from that mount of vision, how faint its noises, how valueless its riches. May the places where Christians are assembled in this city to-day be to them another mount of vision. Especially may the members of Grace church catch such a view of Christ that it will be a perpetual inspiration in all your future labors.

Jesus was founding a new church and he knew the measure of divine glory the disciples needed to illuminate the dark valleys and gild the mountains of difficulty that lay before them. You have entered upon a new church enterprise, and while there is much to encourage there will be trials and sacrifices to be borne, opposition and persecution to be met. You need a divine illumination that will go with you through the struggle to the consummation; that will keep you quiet and patient, yet bold and fearless in the conflict.

Are not your anxious souls crying out with Moses of old when he exclaimed "O! Lord, I beseech thee show me thy glory." That prayer may be answered now. We need not wait 1500 years as Moses did when he came down to Tabor's summit to behold the divine glory; nor need one tarry ten days as the apostles at penticost. The Holy Ghost is given and in its light we may behold the face of Jesus now. You have seen him in the valley, but have you beheld him upon the mount of holiness, where it is none of self, but all of thee? Let us go up now and behold him. His person is all glorious; his garments are white with purity, glistening with glory.

Why do you not see him? It may be your eyes are heavy with the sleep of spiritual death, the stupor of inactivity, or the veil of unbelief may be upon the soul. The world may be between you and Christ; a single eye beholds only one object, then the whole body is full of light. Your vision is divided between many objects; fix it upon Jesus only and you will be thrilled with his glory. Perfect vision is perfect love. Adjust the telescope of faith and gaze as earnestly as a Columbus looking for a new world, and you behold him.

How soft the light that beams from his matchless face,—what expressions of love, what yearning compassion, what effulgent glory! He is coming nearer and nearer. I am enamored of his loveliness. I am swallowed up in his glory, inside the sun of righteousness bounded by glory on every side. My fears are gone, my cares have fled, and joy is mine forever. I have beheld his glory.

If he dwells in us here by and by he will come and take us up in a high mountain apart, up among the eternal hills. He will not invite two or three favored ones, but all who love him. And we shall see not only Moses and Elias, but all the blessed of all the ages, not for a single night but forever.

We shall behold as the central figure of that heavenly family the man of Nazareth, the lord of glory; his royal robes are white and glistening, his brow is circled with the glory of victory. The same divinity shines forth, illuminating the city, "For the lamb is the light thereof." The conversation is not about the decease which shall be accomplished at Jerusalem, but which has been consummated ages before. It is the same immortal theme—Christ manifested in the flesh, Christ crucified, Christ risen, Christ glorified. That story will never lose its interest while Jesus' blood retains its power, and that will be as long as eternity endures.

The great theme of heaven is Jesus, and the great song is unto him who hath loved us and washed us in his own most precious blood.

Yes, we shall climb the mountains by and by, and never come down any more; no more valleys of sorrow; no more prisons for Peter; no more banishment for John; no more martyrdom for James; no more bereavement for earth's sorrowing one; no more fiery temptations; no more years of pain. The former things are passed away; all things are gloriously new.

The Brush Electric Light on Masts.

That the people of Portland may know what is being done, we would inform them that the cost of lighting their city in 1882 was $15,175 48, and in 1883 $17,552 82, with a further increase this year for the excuse of a light furnished. The Oregon Electric Light Company offer to illuminate the city with ten masts, each mast to carry four lamps giving 16,000 candle power of light of the Brush system, exactly the same as the one now lighted on South Third street, for $17,300 per year. Thus the city would receive 100 times more light, allowing each lamp to light four or five blocks. Taxpayers should inspect the mast on Third street.
